ANDREW K. QUINN MAY BE APPOINTED.

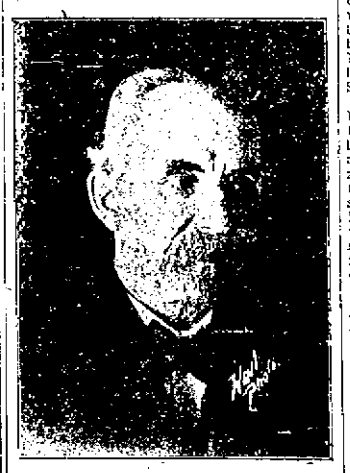

Likely to be the Democrat on the Tax Commission.

Bliss and Davis Expected to be the Republicans Named.

[Special despatch to The News.]

PROVIDENCE, Feb. 16.—Governor Pothier did not announce his appointments of tax commissioners today, as expected, and will not do so until Tuesday. There are signs about the State House which point strongly to the fact that the commission has been selected and that Newport will receive recognition.

Those who have been close to the governor's suite and have seen and heard things are predicting the appointment of Lieutenant Governor Zenas W. Bliss as chairman of the commission and Frank T. F. Davis of Gloucester, chairman of the house finance committee, as the second Republican member. There has been a strong argument that Newport should be recognized, and this having been practically granted the man for this position has next been sought.

Governor Pothier has had many conferences with those who profess to know Newport and there seems to be almost a unanimity of opinion that if the Democratic appointee is to come from Newport he should be Andrew K. Quinn. He is represented as one of the old-line Democrats who is still in favor with his party and has the respect of the citizens of the community. An additional reason which has been presented for this appointment is that he was for a number of years an assessor of taxes in Newport, and has had the tax situation more in hand than any member of that board for many years.

Mr. Quinn this afternoon said he had received no notice that he is being considered and had not had an opportunity to determine whether he would accept or not.

ALL GOING TO VOTE FOR TAFT.

General Wilson's Declaration Regarding Rhode Island Republicans.

CENTRAL FALLS, Feb. 16.—The first official statement of the Republican party regarding its Presidential preference was made last night by General Charles A. Wilson, the acknowledged leader of the party in this state, who told the Young Men's Republican Club here that the Republicans favor President Taft for re-election. "I am proud to be a member of the party which produced such illustrious leaders as Lincoln, Grant and McKinley," he said, "and one of the greatest men of his time, President Taft, for whom we are all going to vote next November."

UNDER TAFT'S DIRECTION.

Lieutenant Burt of Atlanta to be Re-Instated in the Navy.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 16.—President Taft has directed that former Lieutenant Charles P. Burt of Atlanta, Ga., be re-instated in the navy and promoted to the rank of lieutenant commander. Burt, who was discharged several months ago for failure to pass his examination for promotion, was re-examined by a special board of officers, at the request of Senator Bacon of Georgia. He was found to possess the necessary mental, moral and physical qualifications.

In 1909 a board held Burt deficient in navigation and unfit for promotion because of a "moral deficiency," about $400 of debts, which since have been paid.

REVOLUTION IN TIMOR.

The Capital Dilli Seized by the Rebels and Pillaged.

LISBON, Feb. 16.—Advices from the Portuguese colony of Timor, in the Malay archipelago, state that a serious revolution has broken out among the natives there. The rebels, according to the despatches, have attacked and seized the capital, Dilli, which they pillaged. They committed many murders and carried off a large quantity of valuables, foodstuffs and arms and ammunition. They also set fire to several factories an dother buildings.

A band of the rebels decapitated two Portuguese officers and several soldiers, whose heads they stuck on poles. They also abducted a number of women and held them for ransom, afterwards riding into the country districts. The government has ordered the despatch of 400 troops, supported by a Portuguese gunboat, to the island.

AINSWORTH TO BE COURT-MARTIALED.

Adjutant General Under Suspension from Duties.

Friction Culminates in Report Reflecting on Superiors.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 16.—While no order of military arrest has been issued, the status of Major General Frederick C. Ainsworth today is that of an officer of the army under suspension from the exercise of his duties as adjutant general and under orders to remain in Washington pending the adoption of disciplinary measures by the War Department. This is thoroughly well understood to mean that General Ainsworth is to be tried by court-martial on a military charge which translated into plain English is to the effect that he is alleged to have been guilty of disrespect to General Leonard Wood, chief of staff, his senior in the army, and to Secretary of War Stimson, his official superior.

The War Department officials are busy selecting the court which will try General Ainsworth and in formulating the charges. Necessarily a number of retired officers of high rank must be placed on the court and the department is communicating with some of these officers woh are not now in Washington to ascertain if they would find it feasible and acceptable to serve on the court, which from the importance of the issue is likely to be one of the most notable in army history. It may be several days before the issue of the formal order creating the court and citing General Ainsworth before it.

Although the issues to be tried are exceedingly important, involving as they do old rancorous disputes which have been waged between the line and the staff for a century, legal officers of the department do not believe the trial itself will consume much time. It is believed that the evidence to be presented will be principally documentary, including the various orders and reports which have issued from the adjutant general's office within the past four years, and especially the letter made public yesterday from Secretary Stimson to General Ainsworth, formally charging him with disrespectful conduct.

In view of the limited accommodations at the War Department, the court probably will assemble at the war college or at Fort Myer, across the Potomac.

General Ainsworth maintains the attitude of absolute reticence which he has steadfastly occupied since Secretary Stimson's letter was made public and it is understod that he is arranging for counsel and preparing his own defense.

It is fully expected at the War Department that this case will figure extensively before Congress and that perhaps the Democratic House may take steps to investigate thoroughly the whole War Department, and especially the relations between the general staff and the adjutant general's office. Officials of the War Department profess to concern at this, taking the ground that the President, as commander-in-chief of the army, is the only constitutional authority authorized to deal with the issue presented in the Ainsworth case, and that no Congressional interference would be tolerated.

Friends of General Ainsworth in the House were said today to be preparing a resolution for introduction and it was said an effort would be made to have the scope of the inquiry so widened as to include an inquiry into the administration of affairs in Cuba at the time General Leonard Wood, now chief of staff of the army, was military governor of the island. Judge Advocate General Crowder was busy today preparing the charges on which General Ainsworth will be tried by court-martial.

Meantime the House took a hand in War Department affairs by adopting an amendment to the army appropriation bill consolidating the offices of chief of staff, adjutant general and inspector general into a single bureau of the general staff. The chief of staff would be the supreme and directing head, wit hthe adjutant general and inspector general members of the staff.

Serious friction has long existed between the adjutant general's office and the general staff and the crisis came when Secretary Stimson sided with the latter. Matters were brought to an issue by a report made last week by General Ainsworth to the Secretary in connection with the muster and pay rolls when Secretary Stimson felt that the adjutant general had used language which impugned his own integrity and fairness as well as that of other officers of the department.

The record shows that General Ainsworth remarked that it would be difficult if not impossible to formulate any statement which would carry conviction to any one mindful of consequences or so uninformed as to the needs of the government and the public. It was assumed that he referred either to the Secretary or to the officers of the general staff. Again, the adjutant general characterized the staff proposal "as a mere subterfuge of the kind that would be scorned by honorable men" and that the proponents "had betrayed a lamentable lack of knowledge." He also spoke of "the cool assurance" of the officers and remarked that "it will be worse than useless to present further facts or arguments here." It also is charged that General Ainsworth insinuated improper motives on the part of the chief of staff in relieving certain recruiting officers.

Secretary Stimson in a note to General Ainsworth said rudeness and ill temper had become habitual on the part of the latter. He also declared the Ainsworth report to be the culmination of a series of outbreaks evidencing "such intolerable insubordination and such readiness to impugn the motives or the injustice of those with whom it is your duty to work in association as, if uncorrected, to destroy your usefulness in your present office."

Regarding the attack upon himself, Secretary Stimson said he referred the matter to the president, who directed Ainsworth's release pending disciplinary measures.

General Leonard Wood, chief of staff, has had many clashes with General Ainsworth.

Although a rupture between the general staff and the adjutant general's Building Inspector Sullivan's Act Favorably Reported.

[Special despatch to The News.]

PROVIDENCE, Feb. 16.—While the combined sessions of the two branches of the legislature today occupied but 17 minutes, considerable interesting business was brought up. The senate consumed the least time, yet its journal contains the largest record for the day. It did not convene until 12:30, because Lieutenant Governor Bliss was held in consultation with Governor Pothier, presumably over the appointment of the tax commissioners.

Senator Wilbour of Little Compton, for the committee on corporations, reported back a bill on working hours for women and children, which had been wrongfully referred. It was sent to the judiciary committee.

Senator Horton, for the judiciary committee, reported back the act entitled additional safety of persons against fire. This permits building inspectors to compel the placing of fire escapes on buildings of two and a half stories in compact localities. It is an act which Building Inspector Sullivan of Newport sought to have passed last year, but which became lost in the shuffle of the later days of the session. The committee has recommended its passage and it is now on the calendar.

Senator Dixon of Bristol presented the annual report of the Board of Soldiers' Relief, which was ordered printed.

Senator Jones of Johnston introduced an act which is expected to cause a hearty protest from the liquor interests of the state. It would make it illegal to display advertising or mechanical devices or attract attention to intoxicating beverages and liquors in places which have no licenses for the sale of the same. The act is intended to remove this class of advertising from billboards, street cars, newspapers and illuminated signs on housetops. It provides that each day such advertisment remain shall constitute a separate offense and penalties are provided. Referred to the judiciary committee.

Senator Bennett of Woonsocket introduced an act to establish a branch of the State Free Employment Bureau in that city. Referred to the judiciary committee.

Senator McKenna of Cumberland, for the fifth time in as many years, introduced an act to make it a crime for employers to coerce or intimidate employes from joining labor unions. Referred to the committee on labor legislation, which in the past has failed to report the bill.

In the house Mr. Watts of Narragansett introduced a resolution providing for the payment to the town treasurer certain money erroniously paid the state treasurer for taxes. Referred to the committee on accounts and claims.

Mr. McLoughlin of Woonsocket introduced a bill providing for eight hours of work for mechanics and laborers in the state's employ. Referred to the committee on labor legislation.

From the calendar were taken and passed the resolution to pay the bill of the janitor of the Kentish Guards and that to pay the town of South Kingstown $87.57 wrongfully paid the state treasurer.

After the session the judiciary committee held a hearing of the bill providing that all vehicles shall carry lights after dark. The act is pressed by automobilists, who find trouble in making speed on the country roads because farm wagons plod along in the darkness without lights, and automobile owners and organizations were strongly represented.

LIEUTENANT FIELDS ARRESTED.

Accidental Invasion of Mexican Territory to be Investigated.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 16.—A thorough investigation is to be made by army officers into the accidental "invasion" of Mexican territory yesterday at Juarez, when Lieutenant Benjamin W. Fields took a detachment of the Eighteenth infantry across the boundary on a loop trolley car. Lieutenant Fields has been placed under arrest at El Paso pending the outcome.

While the War Department is convinced that the mistake was due to then nfamiliarity of Fields and his men with the fact that the trolley car they boarded was to cross into Mexican territory before reaching its final destination on American soil, it is desired that this fact be thoroughly impressed on th Mexican officials.

The Mexican government has promised the United States to protect the the Americans now at Tlahualilo, in the state of Durango.

At Palomas on the border inte, just south of Columbus, New Mexico, the rebels are reported to be permitting goods of all kinds to come into Mexico at one half the regular tariff duties. While conditions in Juarez are said to be favorable to the government conditions farther west, in Chihuahua, particularly the Cases Grandes region, are still unsettled. There is much opposition to the government and the rebels continue to interfere with the running of trains south of Juarez.

Pierce Man Checkmate Move to Perpetuate Standard Oil Combine.

ST. LOUIS, Feb. 15.—In a bitter fight which raged today at the stockholders, meeting for annual election, Henry Clay Pierce and his associates checkmated the effort of John D. Rockefeller and the Standard Oil interests to take absolute control of the Waters-Pierce Oil Company.' The prize at stake is shown by sworn testimony in a recent suit that the Waters-Pierce concern, in one year, declared a dividend of $240,000. The capital stock is $400,000.

Although Standard Oil interests own 58 per cent of the stock of the company, the Pierce interests refused to count the ballots of John D. Rockefeller, John D. Archbold and their associates on the ground they were attempting to perpetuate the Standard Oil combine under a new system, in contravention of the decree of the Supreme Court dissolving the oil company, and the decree of the Missouri supreme court ousting it from this state.

The Rockefeller-Standard Oil interests filed a mandamus suit to compel the tellers to count the Standard Oil ballots, but the tellers appointed by Pierce refused to accept them and declared the Pierce state board of directors elected.

The controversy between the conflicting interests will be fought out in court, beginning before Circuit Judge Kinsey, Saturday, when the alternative writ of mandamus comes up for argument.

The move of the Rockefeller-Standard Oil interests to exercise control over the Waters-Pierce Oil Company, according to a statement given out by one of Pierce's representatives, is part of a country-wide plan to perpetuate the oil monopoly. The good faith of the Standard Oil people in complying with the decree of the United States Supreme Court dissolving the Standard Oil Trust was attacked in the Pierce statement.

PORTSMOUTH.

Amusing Production of the Musical Comedy, "The New Minister" by Holy Trinity Choir.

[Regular correspondence of The News.]

Much can be said in praise of the rendering of the musical comedy, "The New Minister," by the Holy Trinity choir of Tiverton, under the direction of its choir master, James H. Todsen, at St. Paul's guild house, Portsmouth, Thursday evening. There were 23 in the cast of which Mr. Frank Murphy of Fall River was the "star." He represented a half-witted, overgrown youth to whom every prank was allowed and his make-up was inimitable. "The Minister," William James of Fall River, cornetist and soloist, and the other members of the cast did themselves credit.

The characters were: Rev. Homer Alexander Brown, William James; Professor Topnote; James H. Todsen; Crescendo B. Flat, Andrew Corey; Hezekiah Sharp, Mr. Revenscroft; Isaac Natural, Joseph Greenwood; Dr. Hoosick, James Whalley; Ralph Bunser, Charles Livesey; Seth Perkins, Frank Murphy; Daisy Lovejoy, Mrs. Edgar Durfee; Odelia Hasbin, Mrs. James H. Todsen; Petunia Purples, Dora Negus; Uncle Alec, John Smith; Augusta Wink, Minnie Rose; Mrs. Deacon Barney, Miss Lizzie Green.

The songs were "Nature's voices sing," Professor Topnote and choir with obligato; "Let me sing," solo, Mrs. Edgar Durfee; "When I shovel in the coal," sexton and chorus; "The Music Committee," Flat, Sharp, Natural and James Whalley; "A pretty little flower is a daisy," Mrs. Durfee and male octete, "The Ladies Aid," chorus; "The Kind of preacher I like," Charles Livesey; "Old Maids' Lament," chorus; "Hurrah for the Minister New," ensemble chorus; "How do you think you'll like the man," chorus. Ladies' Aid; "What will the poor preacher do," part song, Daisy, Henrietta Brown and Sharp; "Who Tolled the Bell," sexton and Old Maids' chorus; "Tickets for the Potpie supper," chorus, Ladies' Aid; "I haven't made up my mind," minister and chorus; "The New Minister," finale.

Topnote, leader of the choir, was dressed comically in a robe of black and white wig, and Seth Perkins in a costume of big, short trousers, red tie and Buster Brown collar.

The guild house was crowded, about 200 being present; applause was continuous, and encores frequent, though reasonable.

St. Paul's guild, Mrs. Frederick Nash president, assisted by a number of the members—Mrs. Frederick Cooke, Mrs. William Lawrence, Mrs. William P. Grinnell and others—sold chocolate, ice cream and cake. Mrs. Guy Malone and Mrs. Herbert Ashley had the table of home-made candy and fancy work, from which a good sum was realized for St. Paul's guild.

Mr. James H. Dennis, rector of Holy Trinity, made a little speech at the close, thanking all for their assistance.

The Ladies' Benevolent Society of the Methodist Episcopal Church met Thursday afternoon. There was a good attendance and considerable work accomplished.

William Reigal, the lad who is sick with blood poisoning at Mr. Frank L. Gallman's, remains about the same. It was a scratch on his ear, made by a red rambler bush, which developed into blood poisoning, from which he has been dangerously ill for 19 days.

Mrs. John R. Coggeshall has returned from a visit to Lynn, Mass.

The Thursday afternoon bridge whist was entertained by Mrs. Minot A. Steele. The places of Miss Gertrude E. Macomber and Miss Lillian Chandler were supplied by Mrs. Alfred E. Mott and Miss Evelyn B. Chase. Mrs. Burton W. Storrs took the prize, a pair of silk stockings; also the season's prize, this being the last meet of the season, a Florentine picture frame. The score cards were pretty, having been tinted by Mrs. Steele. Egg salad, rolls, cake and coffee were served by the hostess.

Miss Bessie Croucher has gone to the Newport Hospital for an operation.

The S. E. Club met with Mrs. Joshua Coggeshall Wednesday, with all the members present. An appetizing dinner was served.

LINCOLN MEMORIALS.

The Proposed Monument at the National Capital Yet to be Begun.

A Gettysburg-to-Washington Highway Would be a Constant Reminder to Thousands.

[New York Evening Post.]

So many memorials of one sort or another to the memory of Abraham Lincoln have been built within recent years that it would be hopeless to attempt to enumerate them. At the time of the centennial of his birth, many buildings and monuments were begun or finished, and as many more plans for the future memorials were launched. Of the latter, several have advanced in the last three years to the point of actual construction, but the most important, or at any rate, the most costly, of all the memorials yet conceived has yet to be begun. This is the proposed national memorial to be erected in Washington, for which Congress has appropriated the sum of $2,000,000.

Differences of opinion over the best site for the national memorial have caused the delay in starting work. The question is still unsettled, although there is a prospect that one of two sites will be chosen before long. These are the Potomac Park site and the Meridian Hill site and a Lincoln Memorial Commission is now considering arguments in favor of each. An art commission, composed of D. A. Burnham, Thomas Hastings, Daniel C. French, Charles Moore, and Frederick Law Olmsted, Jr., has been appointed as a sort of sub-committee to report on the two sites.

The Potomac Park site was first officially brought up in 1901, when the are commission, composed of practically the same members as at present, presented a report to Congress advocating a general improvement scheme for the capital. The main feature of this scheme was to be a great mall leading from the Capitol to the Potomac. On either side of this mall would be government buildings, with the Washington monument in the architectural centre. Close to the Washington memorial needle, between it and the Potomac, it was planned to erect a monument to bear the name of Lincoln. A memorial to Lincoln, if placed here, would be on low ground and under the shadow of the Washington monument. Although a higher and more important site for the Lincoln memorial is generally desired by those in close touch with the situation, the memorial commission seems to be influenced to a certain extent by the art commission's recommendation.

In the opinion of many who have given close study to the question, the consideration of the Meridian Hill and the Soldiers' Home sites should have first place in the deliberations of the Congressional commission. To give an adequate impression of what these two sites really mean, one can scarcely do better than quote from the report submitted to the Lincoln Memorial Commission by John R. Pope.

"The city of Washington," he says, "has two dominating, ever present vital features. They express her purpose and our ideals. They are carried in the minds of all men and are a constant educational and moral factor among them. They are the dome of the Capitol and the monument to Washington.

"Each has its own individuality, grandeur and loftiness of purpose to beauty; the vital element in these two monuments is that they rise above us. The Capitol is on an elevation 88 feet above the Potomac and its dome begins its rise 100 feet above. The crest of Meridian Hill has an elevation of 185 feet, or is approximately 100 feet above the Capitol site. The crest of the hill on the axis of North Capitol street in the Soldiers' Home grounds has an elevation of 210 feet, or approximately 130 feet higher than the site of the Capitol.

"The Meridian Hill site and the Soldiers' Home grounds site are on main axes of the city plan. They are suitably situated for monuments of the first order. Both sites possess qualities absolutely necessary to an unhampered expression of purpose in the monuments on them, by reason of their independence of surrounding important architectural dictates, considerations, or comparisons.

"The Soldiers' Home Grounds site possesses the grand qualities of isolation, of elevation, of unlimited area of beautifully treed parking, and of control of all surroundings affecting it. It is not too remotely situated and is easy of access. It is in the author's opinion a location in the biggest, finest sense for a great memorial, and the finest in Washington for that purpose."

Closely connected with the proposed national memorial, was a proposal to build a Lincoln memorial roadway connecting Washington with the battlefield of Gettysburg. This scheme, which was put forward for a time as a substitute for the $2,000,000 memorial monument, has for the time being been dropped, although there are those who still look forward to its accomplishment. Two years ago, a Lincoln Memorial Road Association was formed in this city, and it got so far as to introduce a bill before the House of Representatives favoring its plan.

An effort to revive the memorial roadway plan, in fact, will be made in Washington soon—the movement having the backing of motorists in addition to various members of Congress, headed by Speaker Champ Clark. There will be a hearing before the library committee, March 5, on the Borland bill providing for the construction of the Gettysburg-to-Washington highway. According to Robert P. Hooper, president of the American Automobile Association, the support of motorists in this connection is not purely due to the desire for good roads.

"In memorializing the memory of such a great man as Lincoln," said Mr. Hooper recently, "it may be that motorists are somewhat prejudiced in contending for the highway, but when one studies Roman history his recollection of Appius Claudius is quickly brought to mind by the famous Appian Way. In like manner the Lincoln Way would be a constant and daily reminder to thousands of people."

The plan suggested called for a road 200 feet wide, in the centre of which was a greensward 40 or 50 feet wide, containing here and there a flower garden or other decorative feature. On either side of this was a fine roadway of about the same width, one for swift-moving vehicles and the other for slower ones. Outside of these could be double-tracked electric railways, separated from the driveways by hedges. Bordering the thoroughfare on either side were to be rows of stately trees, the rows broken at places where there is a fine view. The cost of the road, together with entrance and terminals, was estimated at $3,000,000.

One of the principal features of the memorial roadway in Iowa was the formal entrance of the Lincoln memorial farm near Hodgenville, Ky., on the site of the ex-President's birthplace. It was Robert J. Collier who

LA FOLLETTE'S BREAKDOWN.

Condition so Serious That He Cannot be a Presidential Candidate This Year.

That Senator La Follette's breakdown is so serious it is utterly out of the question for him to be a Presidential candidate this year, is what friends close to him are declaring in all sincerity. His true condition, however, is being hidden from his own mind by reports given to the newspapers, in which statements are so colored that all looks encouraging to his eyes as he reads the paragraphs.

It is now realized that his performance at the Periodical Publishers' Association at Philadelphia was the result of the breakdown rather than its occasion. He had already lost control of himself. Here is what happened, according to veracious people who have returned to Washington:

On the train going over he read from manuscript his speech to his secretary. It took just 31 minutes in delivering it he took by actual computation just two hours and 31 minutes. He repeated himself sadly, relating the same thing over and over again. By count, he read over the same ground in one place seven times. The heartless listeners, wearied by his reading and without understanding the real cause of the trouble, became so impatient they would call out, half-jeeringly, what they knew was coming on the manuscript. In one place he gave a series of developments of the money power. He recited it so many times that a cry would arise in the audience, "And the third stage was!"

When Mr. La Follette finished speaking, he threw his head back and to one side, closing his eyes, and bringing his right arm directly over his forehead. In that posture he sat crouched up for the rest of the evening, as still as if he were dead. He did not appear to hear what Don Seitz, the presiding officer, said in denunciation of the speech.

Mr. La Follette's impromptu utterances, were, by common consent, those of an unbalanced man. He began his speech by telling his audience that he was going to read what he had to say, so as to have a record of it, because he knew most of those present would not like it, and that they might in consequence misrepresent it. He avowed that he was not going to be misrepresented, and, shaking the manuscript in the air, as if in defiance, declared that he had before him what would refute them if they attempted any such tactics.

Curiously enough, most of those present had never seen him before. They had been looking forward in anticipation to his appearance. They were the editors, publishers, special writers on the weeklies and the 10-cent magazines, which have made him. They were some time in getting their bearings as the strange performance proceeded, and it is only now that the outside public begins to perceive what the whole affair meant. It was a nervously distraught man who spoke in Philadelphia, one who ought to have been at that moment at a sanatorium.

Mr. La Follette has been burning the candle at both ends. He has been a tremendous worker. Stories of his sitting up all night to go through musty records are widely related in Washington.

What has already been said is indisputably the case. Beyond that considerable differences of opinion are expressed as to the seriousness of the breakdown. Some people believe that his mental condition is such that he will never be himself again; that this country has seen the end of Mr. La Follette as a factor in its politics. Others ridicule that idea, declaring that he is merely tired out, that after a suitable rest, he will be himself again.

THE GERMANY OF TODAY.

A Most Striking Change is the Unprecedented Development of Its Material Life.

[Hugo Munsterberg, in North American Review.]

The most striking change which has come to the new Germany is the unprecedented development of its material life, which seems in direct contrast with Germany's claim for pre-eminence in idealistic endeavors. If a German had left Berlin at the beginning of the eighties and returned today without having seen the capital in the meantime, he would hardly recognize the modest city of the time of the old emperor. Berlin has become rich and luxurious, and every city of the empire and almost every small town repeats this impression given by the metropolis. It has been the change from agrarian Germany to industrial Germany. In the beginning of the eighties more than 200,000 Germans went to America as emigrants every year, as the German soil was not rich enough to support them. Since that time the population has grown rapidly, and yet the emigration has gone down to a tenth part of that earlier figure because the industrial life gives to the sixty-three millions a comfortable support; there are no slums in any German city.

The change is a fundamental one, and this means that it has revolutionized not only the street life and the shop windows, the hotels and the private homes, the places of amusement and the comfort of traveling, but that it has changed the inner attitude of the German mind. That Germany which seems old-fashioned to the younger generation considered the economic life and all which had to do with business and trade and commerce and industry as something of second rank, more or less a necessary evil. The strongest, best elements of the social organization, the intelligent heirs of well-to-do families, became officers and lawyers, scholars and physicians, government employes and land owners, but they looked down on the calling of the business man and on all technical activities. Today in exactly these social groups the callings of the lawyer and of the officer have somewhat lost in attractiveness, and the life-work of the banker, of the business man, and of the manufacturer, and above all the technical professions, have risen rapidly in the general estimation.

But, just as in the glorious times of the renaissance the life in wealth was most harmoniously connected with the life in beauty and with the highest appreciation of scholarship and art and literature, this new turn to commercial strength again seeks its expression in idealistic endeavors. It is not true, as the critics hastily claim, that this new comfort brings with it the vices of the parvenu, sensual materialism and lack of higher standards; it is not true that Germany becomes unfaithful to its great traditions in the ideal realms, because it has ceased to be the poor under-paid and under-fed schoolmaster of the world. On the contrary, the greater means of the land allow an expansion of the joy in art and music and drama such as has not been known before. The institutions for scholarship and research are multiplying on an unprecedented scale, and the alarmingly increasing number of books which appear yearly in Germany indicates surely that the new-fashioned sports have not driven out the old-fashioned German sport of writing.

He who looks to the deeper processes in the national life even discovers the beginning of a great idealistic movement in the younger generation. In philosophy and literature, in politics and art and religion, the mere naturalism and realism seem to be losing ground and to be yielding to a new romanticism. In the universities the philosophical lecture-rooms which were for a long time neglected again attract the scholars of tomorrow. There has come a kind of re-action against the mere collecting of facts and gathering of scientific data. A longing for wide perspectives and for unified views of the world begins a new reign. The eccentricities of the realistic drama have given place to exquisite poetry; the naturalistic stage-setting which was the pride of 20 years ago has been replaced by symbolistic stage effects which speak to the imagination through color and suggestion. The whole field of social problems has become the working-ground for a genuine enthusiastic ethical idealism entirely unknown to the older time which had not discovered its social responsibilities.

PERSONALS.

....Baron Sandhurst has been appointed lord chamberlain in succession to Earl Spencer, who resigned February 9. The resignation of Earl Spencer was attributed to the widespread criticism of the conduct of the censorship of plays. Lord Sandhurst, who succeeds him, was formerly governor of Bombay.

....A telephone speech by President Arthur T. Hadley of Yale University from his home 1,000 miles away in New Haven, Conn., will be the principal feature of the forty-sixth annual banquet of the Yale Alumni Association in Chicago Saturday night. Arrangements have been made for each diner to be given a "watch case" telephone receiver and listen to the speaker as soon as he is "introduced" by the toastmaster.

....The nomination of former Governor Myron T. Herrick of Ohio as ambassador to France to succeed Robert Bacon, resigned, has been confirmed by the Senate. Senator Gronna of North Dakota and certain other Progressive Senators had indicated they would oppose ex-Governor Herrick's nomination, but there were no speeches, however, when the nomination was called in executive session. Mr. Gronna called for an aye and no vote, and absentees were called

....Dr. Jean Charcot of Paris has been officially notified that the American Geographical Society of New York has bestowed on him the Cullum gold medal, the highest distinction offered to Polar explorers. Rear Admiral Peary cabled his congratulations to Dr. Charcot, who leaves shortly for a lecture tour in Russia. The Cullum gold medal was founded by General George W. Cullum, U. S. A., one of the most distinguished graduates of West Point and was first awarded to Rear Admiral Robert E. Peary January 2, 1897.

....England has now, through the death of the Duke of Fife, a duchess in her own right, for the first time in 40 years; that is to say, since the death of Queen Victoria's left hand son, the Duchess of Inverness. Whereas the latter, despite her union to a member of the reigning family, did not enjoy any princely rank, and indeed never really figured at court, the new Duchess of Fife was created a princess by her grandfather, Edward VII, on his birthday, November 9, 1905. He bestowed a similar title on her younger sister, until then known as Lady Maud Duff (the patronymic of the late Duke of Fife), and provided that both the new-fledged princesses should enjoy the predicate of "highness" and should rank immediately after and next to those members of the reigning family bearing the style of royal highness.

CHILDREN'S PARTIES.

Small Cakes Are Always More Acceptable Than the Sliced Loaf.

A Scallop of Ham and Potatoes Ragout of Lamb's Lver Excellent for Hot Suppers.

[Cornelia C. Bedford.]

Among simple and pleasing menus the following would be appropriate:

Beef and Ham Sandwiches
Hot Tea Biscuit
Orange Marmalade
Strawberry Eclairs
Vanilla Ice Cream
Frothed Cocoa

Bouillon in Cups
Chicken Sandwiches
Date and Nut Sandwiches
Frozen Bananas
Fruit Lemonade Iced Sponge Cake
Bon Bons.

Ham Sandwiches
Cold Chicken Hot Biscuit
Lady Fingers tied in Bundles
Angel Cake Rabbit Cake
Ice Cream in Forms
Bon Bons Cocoa

A sandwich filling of beef and ham needs cold roast or boiled beef put twice through the chopper, one half as much chopped cold boiled ham and a good seasoning of salt and pepper. Moisten this with sufficient soft butter to make a paste which will spread easily.

A sweet sandwich filling which is liked by both young and old is dates seeded and chopped to a paste. To this add one half the quantity of grated or chopped English walnuts, two or three drops of vanilla and just sufficient sherry to make a soft paste; where the sweet taste is to be lessened mayonnaise may be substituted for sherry and the vanilla omitted.

Eclair shells may be filled with any fruit marmalade instead of the customary cream, or a mixture of fresh fruit and whipped cream may be substituted.

Small cakes are always more acceptable than sliced loaf cake. The foundation should be a simple cup or sponge cake batter; fancy patty pans make the most delightful molds. The easiest icing is a thin fondant. Dissolve one pint of granulated sugar in one cupful of boiling water and boil without stirring until the syrup hairs when dropped from the tip of a spoon. Set aside undisturbed until the syrup cools enough to be handled, then stir with a spoon. The syrup will first cloud, then thicken. When it becomes too stiff to be stirred gather it up quickly in the hands and work like bread dough until it is soft, smooth and pliable. Pack it in a bowl and cover closely. This may be done several days in advance. When wanted put a portion, say about half a cupful, in a bowl in a pan of hot water and mash and stir until soft. Flavor and color as desired; if quite thin add warm water cautiously, a few drops at a time; be careful in this as it thins with little provocation and must be frequently stirred or it will turn to syrup. Dip the cakes in this, then stand carefully aside until the icing sets—it takes but a few minutes.

For the rabbit cakes chocolate cookies are cut oblong. On the iced ones put a rabbit cut from citron or outline with chocolate icing; on the un-iced ones place rabbits formed of fondant or icing.

Scalloped Ham and Potatoes—Put through the chopper enough cold boiled ham to give one cupful and a half. Cut six large boiled potatoes in thin slices. In a saucepan mix together two tablespoonfuls each of butter and flour, a scant teaspoonful of salt and one third of a teaspoonful of white pepper. When bubbling, stir in gradually one pint of hot milk and cook until smothly thickened. In a buttered dish put alternate layers of potato, ham and sauce until all are used. With a half cupful of stale bread crumbs, mix one tablespoonful of melted butter, spread this over the top and bake in a quick oven until browned.

Fish and Rice—Pick over and flake two cupfuls of salt codfish. Cover with boiling water, let stand for five minuts and drain. Repeat this twice; by this time the fish should be quite fresh. Wash one scant cupful of rice, drop in a kettle of boiling, salted water and keep at a galloping boil until the grains are tender when pressed. Have ready one cupful of white sauce made as in the preceding recipe. Add to it the fish and keep hot at the side of the fire for 10 minutes. Drain the rice and make a wall of it around the edge of a deep platter; turn the hot fish in the centre and sprinkle with a little chopped parsley. Cold boiled or baked fish of any kind may be prepared in the same way.

Cheese Toast—Toast as many slices of stale bread as can be used. Make a pint of white sauce, as for the scalloped ham and potatoes, but scant the flour and salt. Two minutes before taking from the fire stir in one cupful of chopped or grated cheese and stir until it is barely melted, then pour over the hot toast. This is substantial and appetizing.

Ragout of Lamb's Liver—Wash and scald an uncut lamb's liver. Drain, place in a saucepan with one small onion, one scant teaspoonful of salt, a dash of pepper, one clove and one quarter of a bay leaf; cover with boiling water and simmer for an hour then set aside until cold. Cut the meat in inch pieces, rejecting all veins and gristle. Thicken the pot liquor with browned flour, add the cut liver and a sprinkle of curry powder if liked. Simmer gently for 10 minutes; add two tablespoonfuls of sherry and serve, garnished with toast points.

A Good Scallop—Fill a buttered baking dish with alternate layers of boiled rice, canned tomatoes (the thick pulpy portion) and canned corn. Season well with salt and pepper and dot with bits of butter. Sprinkle thickly with buttered crumbs and bake for 30 minutes in a hot oven.

"THE ROTHSCHILDS RULE EUROPE."

"Ever since the battle of Waterloo the Rothschilds have been the actual rulers of Europe, and the European nations are so in debt to them that it would be impossible ever to pay them off," said David Starr Jordan, president of Stanford University, in an address to the student body.

Dr. Jordan arraigned "the unseen empire of finance" in its control over the affairs of Europe an dthe policy of rulers in continuing the practice of contracting war debts. He declared that a European war now is not imminent, because of the destruction of credit, which would entail loss to the financiers who, he declared, control the affairs of the European nations.

MR. TAFT'S RAVEN.

[I. P. Morse, in Boston Globe.]

Once upon a midnight dreary,
As I pondered, weak and weary,
Wondering if the nomination
Would be mine as 'twas before,
Suddenly there came a tapping,
As of some one gently rapping,
Rapping on the White House door.
"'Tis some officeseeker," said I.
"Simply that and nothing more."

Open wide I flung the shutter.
When with many a flirt and flutter,
In there strode a stately raven,
Black as any stevedore:
Perched upon the bust of Teddy,
Just above my office door,
Perched and sat and nothing more.

"Prophet," said I, "good or evil,
Standpat or Insurgent devil,
Tell me this much, I implore.
Who will get the nomination
At the national convention?
Will they give me four years more?"
Quoth the raven:
"Theodore."

"Prohpet," shrieked I, "thing of evil,
Democrat, if not the devil,
Get thee hence from off my door!"
But the raven, never flitting,
Still is sitting, still is sitting,
On the bust of Teddy grinning,
Grinning at me, on my door,
And I feel my hopes are sinking.
And my chances ever shrinking,
While that bird is perched there blinking,
Croaking out his "Theodore!"

FANCIES.

"Look 'ere, Liza Mullins, did you say as I'd collared the tanner you lost?"

"Nothink of the kind! Wot I said was as I'd 'ave found it if you 'adn't 'elped me to look for it."—[Punch.

Griggs—Jones has a position now as buyer of gowns and millinery.

Briggs—Yes, I heard he was married.—[Boston Transcript.

Child of the Suffragette—Mother, dear!

"Yes, Violet."

"May I have a brick, please? There's a police man just outside."

Mrs. Gushington—A husband and wife should have the same tastes—desire the same things.

Mr. Peewee—My wife and I do, but she always gets 'em.

"Does your husband play bridge?"

"Certainly not," replied Mrs. Flimgilt. "He does very well as a partner through life but a partner at bridge has a position of some responsibility."—[Washington Star.

Wife—How nice it would be if all things in the world would work in harmony.

Hub—Wouldn't it though! For instance, if coal would go up and down with the thermometer.—[Boston Transcript.

Mrs. Morningcall—You're looking better than I expected. I had heard that your health was very poor.

Mrs. Newgilt—My health has been impaired but there is nothing poor about us.

"What are you so deeply interested in?"

"It's a serial story about some people who are saving for a steam yacht."

"Good story, is it?"

"Yes; and I expect it will run on for years and years."

"Do you think it is becoming?" she asks, appearing in her newest gown.

"Don't bother about that!" gushes her friend. "It is perfect! It is simply delicious! My dear, it makes you look absolutely helpless."—[Judge's Library.

"Does your boy Josh know how to run your automobile?"

"I think so. His work on the farm appears to have helped him, his personal vocabulary bein' about the same as he uses on a mule."—[Washington Star.

Sunday School Teacher—And when the prodigal son came home, what happened, Tommy?

Tommy—His father ran out to meet him and hurt himself.

Sunday School Teacher—Why, where did you get that?

Tommy—It said his father ran and fell on his neck. I bet it would hurt you to fall on your neck.—[Judge.

POSTAL SAVINGS BANKS IN RHODE ISLAND.

That the postal savings banks have been appreciated by those for whose special benefit they were established have been proved all over the country where they have been located, and nowhere more clearly than in this state. There are 13 of these in Rhode Island and the figures showing the amount of business done are quite surprising, particularly in some of the towns, where an astonishing amount of deposits has been made. It was expected that these banks would be used more in manufacturing centres than in towns almost exclusively residential, and this has proved to be the case. Yet in some places where there is not much manufacturing the total amount of deposits is unexpectedly large and it has been demonstrated that even those who do not need to save in small amounts are inclined to [illegible] in every place where one of these banks has been established and it has been open long enough to give an indication of what it will do there is evidence that the people approve the institution and propose to avail themselves of the opportunity afforded to make Uncle Sam their banker.

The figures revealing the amount of business done by the postal banks in this state also indicate that the people are not slow to use them as a temporary convenience for the saving of money which will be available for immediate use if it is needed or desired. There have been enough withdrawals to show that the deposits were not mere hoardings, but on the contrary these have been used like other savings banks for the temporary deposit of money for which there was no immediate need, but which it was expected would be required in part at least within a short time. This is a good sign, for it means that the people see that these postal banks are for their use as a means of convenient disposal of temporarily superfluous cash, and that they trust the government perhaps more than ordinary savings institutions, and also appreciate the ease with which withdrawals can be made as the money is required.

These banks have been opened gradually during the past year and some have been in existence but a few weeks, so that it is difficult to make comparisons which are fair, but there is hardly one which does not show a healthy business for the time it has been in operation. For the year the total deposits in all the 13 banks in the state was more than $70,000, which is a good showing when it is remembered that only a few of them have been open a full year and most of them but a few months. Naturally Providence reports the greatest amount, as it has by far the largest population, but some of the smaller places indicate more business in proportion. Second on the list is Bristol, with more than $13,000 deposited, while the figures for Providence are about $40,000. This is a surprising amount for the rubber town, because business has been dull in Bristol during the past few months and there has been considerable talk about hardship and suffering in consequence. These figures, however, do not indicate a serious condition of affairs financially in the town.

A study of the figures reported for the towns and villages of the state where these postal banks have been opened is interesting as an indication of the industry and thrift of the people and as showing the ability of a large part of the population with small revenues to save money under ordinary circumstances. It is accepted as a fact that most of the patrons of these banks are of the poorer classes, or at least not of those who are engaged in business, or who belong to what is known as the salaried class. It is a hopeful indication that the industrial situation is good in this state, that the people generally are in a condition to save something from their earnings, and that they are glad to do so when they have the opportunity and it is made easy for them, and at the same time easy to secure their earnings again when they are needed. The postal savings banks have proved their worth and need during the short time they have been in operation.

WE AND OUR SISTER REPUBLICS.

The Nicaraguan refugee in New Orleans who says Secretary Knox will see serious anti-American disturbances before he completes his tour, and may even be in personal danger, may have considerable justification for his prognostications. We are probably not very popular in Latin-America. Secretary Root's trip through South America was apparently a great success, but his relations were with the governments and they made his visits as pleasant as possible for reasons of public policy, which does not necessarily reflect public feeling.

Cubans do not regard us with much cordiality because we intervened in their affairs once, are believed to have recently made another threat of intervention, and stand ready at all times to occupy the island when we deem it necessary. In Mexico we have always had many enemies, partly racial, partly as a reminiscence of the war of 60 years ago, and in the past year re-inforced by followers of Diaz and Madero, neither party being entirely satisfied with our course during the Madero revolution.

In Colombia of course there is intensely bitter feeling over the Panama episode, which will not be forgotten for a long time. In Nicaragua we intervened just enough to make enemies of the followers of both Zelaya and Estrada. It is not yet forgotten in Chili and Peru that a generation ago we intervened in their quarrel enough to irritate Chili, which has accumulated a few grounds for annoyance since, and not enough to save Peru. It is not long since the Venezuelans were furious at us, although we had recently saved them from England in the boundary dispute.

While Secretary Root's trip was diplomatically a success, its commercial value is greatly exaggerated. Our trade with South America has been growing rapidly, but it began expanding several years before the Secretary went through those countries, and merchants are only in exceptional cases influenced in ordering goods by the diplomatic relations between their own and other countries.

THE AWAKENED SENSE OF JUSTICE.

We find it pretty difficult now to punish unquestionable criminals and nothing distresses us so much as the discovery that an innocent person has been imprisoned or a man punished greatly in excesso of his deserts. This is the result of a modern development of the ethical sense, increased consciousness of the brotherhood of man, and a cultivation of the feeling of pity of which our great-grandparents knew very little.

At present New York from the governor down to the "man on the street" is greatly stirred by fear that a man who is serving a sentence of 30 years did not commit the crime for which he was convicted, and perhaps committed no punishable offense. Last year it was learned by the confession of a returned immigrant in Europe that a man was serving a life term in the penitentiary in Pittsburg for a murder of which he was innocent. He was released and has returned to his native land and his wife, with a small pension from Andrew Carnegie, in whose mill he was working at the time of his conviction. Individuals felt that the state of Pennsylvania ought to make him some reparation, but there is no way of doing that except by a special act of the legislature, and as Carnegie did something for him the state was glad to drop the matter and forget him. A few years ago England was shocked at the discovery that a man had been convicted and sent to prison for several years for a crime which he had not committed; he was released and the government paid him a round sum as indemnity.

Public sentiment today cares about these things. In the eighteenth century public opinion in England cared little for judicial "accidents" of this sort, and the court methods were not such as to afford much protection of poor and friendless persons accused of crime. With the advance of democracy as a political force there has been an increase in humanity as a moral force and great pains are taken to prevent "accidents" by the criminal courts. When it is found that they have happened the whole community is deeply stirred by a miscarriage of justice which would have excited little feeling a century ago, when penalties were frightfully severe and the list of capital offenses a long one.

The New Bedford Standard Thursday observed the sixty-second anniversary of its existence, having been started by Edmund Anthony as an independent journal and being such still. Mr. Anthony was a Free Soil Democrat and later a Republican, and while the Standard has been a Republican paper in many ways it has not varied from the "independent journal" idea which was foremost in its founder's mind and has been ever ready to look at matters fairly and squarely. The sixty-second anniversary is made the occasion for giving a description of the recent large additions to the already extensive printing establishment where the Standard is published, with something about its capacity for meeting the demands made on a live newspaper in these days.

Broadway, New York, is to be widened for a length of five miles by the compulsory removal of all obstructions on either side, which by slow degrees have been encroaching upon the thoroughfare. Everything which extends beyond the street line is to be sliced off, and excrescences in the form of porches, signs, pillars, sidewalk stands and show cases, and perhaps even parts of fronts of buildings will come off. The people feel that they have the right to use the sidewalks and the authorities have agreed to give them all the room they can.

Fourteen years after the Maine was blown up in Havana harbor the corner-stone of a national monument, in commemoration of the 266 sailors who lost their lives in that disaster, was laid with appropriate exercises in Central Park, New York. The monument, which will be completed in August, will cost $175,000, most of which was collected in small sums from more than a million men, women and children in the United States.

The people of Newport interested in the disposal of city waste, of whom there should be a large number, will wish to hear Mr. Pell W. Foster of New York, president of the Destructor Company, speak on the subject of the cremation of all forms of refuse, and of apparatus therefor. The meeting under the auspices of the Committee of Twenty-Five will be open to all, including women.

The Chinese republic seems to be fairly well established. Has it really come to stay, or will revolutions continue to disturb the peace and harmony of the country?

The present legislature is acquiring a reputation for really doing something.

FOND OF OTHER PEOPLE'S DOGS.

Man Spends Half His Life in Prison for Enticing Animals Away from Their Owners.

Dog owners in London are happy, for their pets are safe from the hands of William Cook, known by the sobriquet of "The Chinaman," for the next 18 months. Cook was passionately fond of dogs—other people's—and his penchant for taking them under his care has already caused him to devote more than half of his lifetime—he is 65 years of age—in jail. His latest escapade was to steal an Aberdeen terrier, valued at $250, the property of Mr. H. Attenborough of Knightsbridge, for which he was convicted and sentenced a few days ago.

Cook is the original of the entertaining reminiscence in the late Mr. Montague Williams's book, "Leaves of a Life." The story goes that when in the early days of his practice at the bar Mr. Williams lost a valuable dog of which he was very fond. As a result of advertising to recover the pet a ruffianly looking individual called on him to offer his services to discover the whereabouts of the dog, mentioning in whispers that he was acquainted with scoundrels who made a practice of stealing pet dogs. Being greatly attached to the missing animal, Mr. Williams acceded to the demand of $50 or $100 as a preliminary payment, and in time the dog was restored.

Some years afterward—in 1887—Mr. Williams was at Middlesex sessions to prosecute in several cases. Among them was a case against a man for stealing a dog. When this came on for hearing Mr. Williams was astonished at recognizing in the prisoner as the man who had blackmailed him years before for the restoration of his dog. Diligently re-studying the case, he found that the only charge against Cook was one of misdemeanor, for which the maximum punishment was 18 months' imprisonmena. Reading through the evidence again, Mr. Williams found there was a collar on the dog when it disappeared, and as the theft of a dog's collar comes under the category of a felony, punishable with penal servitude, Mr. Williams promptly had a felony indictment added, with the result that Cook was set down for five years' penal servitude.

"The Chinaman" never forgot the arguments as to the distinction between "misdemeanor" and "felony" afterward, for while he has many times confessed to stealing dogs he has always maintained that they had no collars on when they came into his unlawful possession. Cook once stole Paddy, a dog owned by a one time commissioner of police, but restored it on the understanding that no questions would be asked. He also made the Duke of Fife happy by restoring his pet dog, which "went astray" for a consideration. He had a wonderful knowledge of the value of dogs, and his method of enticing them away was to sprinkle a thin layer of a preparation of powdered liver and aniseed in the "turn-up" of the legs of his trousers.

Prospects for Union of Two Baptist Churches Not Encouraging.

New Principal for the Westerly High School—Needs of the Institute for the Deaf.

Developments at meetings Thursday evening of the Jefferson Street Baptist and Park Street Baptist Churches of Providence indicated that the prospects for the union of the two parishes are dubious. At the Jefferson street congregation's meeting the committee which has been investigating the advisability of joining the two churches, which cover the same field, gave its report. This neither recommended nor rejected the proposition for a merger. Further consideration of the matter was deferred for a week. At the meeting of the Park Street Church the matter of merging the two churches was not taken up, as no report on the feasibility of the plan was presented. Plans were on foot about two years ago to effect a coalition of the two churches under the name of the United Baptist Church, but were abandoned. It is considered likely that action by one or both church corporations may be taken soon, but the likelihood of a consummation of the plans for union is said to be remote.

The school committee of Westerly has elected Willard H. Bacon, Brown, 1900, at present principal of the high school at Rochester, N. H., to fill the vacancy in the principalship of the Westerly high school. He will begin work after the spring recess. Since graduating from Brown Mr. Bacon has taught at the high school in Charleston, N. H., at the Mitchell boys' school in Billerica, Mass., where he was assistant principal; at the Technical high school in Providence, assistant principal; at Cedarcraft school, Kenneth Square, Pa., and at the high school in Avon, Mass., where he was principal. George T. Weston, principal of the Technical high school in Providence, writes thus of Mr. Bacon: "He is a strong man, but left us to accept a better offer. His good scholarship, excellent discipline, popularity with boys and strong athletic training all make him a specially desirable man."

Referring to some of the future needs of the Rhode Island Institute for the Deaf, Edwin G. Hurd, the principal, in his annual report to the General Assembly, declares that additional dormitory room for the accommodation of the girl pupils will be required soon. Immediate improvements which are needed, says the report, include the placing of the main building in good condition. New furnishings are also needed in the officers' and teachers' apartments and for the pupils. The total number of pupils during the first half year was 76 and there was an average attendance of 74, with a total of 75 and an average of 72 for the second half year. For the year the average attendance was 73. The oral method of teaching is followed in this school, instruction being given through speech, speech reading and writing. Signs and finger spelling are not recognized or employed. The work along lines of industrial training primary manual training, cabinet making, sewing, cooking and religious science gymnasium work and religious instruction is detailed at some length. The health of the pupils is reported to have been good during the past year, with but few cases of serious disease developing. Included with this report is that of the president of the institute, the report of aurist, the dentist and the financial report of the board. The latter shows that the appropriation of the General Assembly of $28,000 has been fully expended. The board urges an appropriation this year of $30,000 plus the income for the present year.

Anticipating the coming work of the tax commission and in response to urgent requests from certain of the corporations of the state which desire to make their returns as soon as possible, Clerk Edward P. Tobie of the tax committee has prepared blank return forms, which are now in the hands of the printer. They cover the returns to be made by banks, manufacturing corporations and public service corporations. As these returns must be in the hands of the commission-to-be by the first of March, under the law, the preparation of the return blanks is made necessary at this time.

News has reached Providence of the shooting of Percy Crandall, a former North Providence boy, at Columbia, S. C., two weeks ago. Crandall, who was 17 years old, was shot by Jesse McNinch in front of his father's store at Columbia, but the bullet, it was found later, was meant for McNinch's brother. McNinch, who is about 14 years of age, is now a prisoner in the county jail. The coroner's inquest resulted in the verdict that Crandall came to his death from an abdominal wound caused by a pistol shot. Crandall, who was 17 years of age, at one time attended the Centredale school. He was the son of Mr. and Mrs. D. H. Crandall, former residents there.

THE FORTY-EIGHTH STATE.

[New York Tribune.]

Arizona became a state yesterday, when President Taft signed the proclamation admitting it into the Union. Its entry will probably close the circle for many years to come, since, excepting the District of Columbia and Alaska, there is now no territory left in continental United States on which to draw for new commonwealths. No one outside the federal district can think seriously of erecting it into a state, and Alaska's development is bound to be tedious and uncertain. The territorial form of government will undoubtedly suffice for its needs for two or three more generations. There remains the prospect that Texas may decide to take advantage of the stipulation under which it was annexed, which permits it to sub-divide into five states. But that prospect is remote, since Texans have an intense pride in the immensity of their state and look forward to the day when it will be the most populous and powerful commonwealth in the Union. Statehood for any of the insular possessions is a still remoter probability, since such a step would involve a dangerous modification of national policy.

The forty-eighth state in order of admission ranks fifth in area. It covers 113,020 square miles, less than half the area of Texas, with 265,780 miles, but well up to the three next largest—California, with 158,360; Montana, with 146,080, and New Mexico, with 122,580. In population it ranked forty-fifth in 1910, with Delaware, Wyoming and Nevada below it. Its growth between 1900 and 1910 was unexpectedly rapid, the actual gain in inhabitants being 81,423 and the percentage of gain 68.2. Arizona seems to have passed safely the stage of stagnation in which Nevada so long languished. As a state it will not be another Nevada, since its population is now more than twice as large as Nevada's nd more than five times as large as Nevada's was 35 years after acquiring statehood.

The development of irrigation has turned the deserts of the Southwest into tillable land, only awaiting the coming of the water ditches. Arizona is therefore not likely ever to be classified as a "sagebrush" state. It will develop a substantial agricultural prosperity of its own and easily keep abreast of the general growth of the country. Like Oklahoma, it has shown itself somewhat coltish in its political ideas, but it will probably soon steady down and become a creditable and sanely progressive commonwealth.

PLANS FOR A NEW BAND.

Proposed Consolidation of the Musical Organizations and Musicians of the City.

A committee which has been at work during the winter in an endeavor to consolidate the musical organizations of the city, with the view of forming a large and efficient band for summer and concert music, has been successful in interesting a large number of musicians in the project. The idea is to form one band, composed of the members of existing organizations and such independent musicians who have heretofore been unwilling to join any of these. The original committee has added to its number members from the different bands in the city and a joint circular has been sent out calling for a rehearsal next week. The circular says:

"As the object of the committee has been to harmonize the various musical interests in the city, it is proposed to form a new band with a new name, and with this end in view a joint committee representing the various musical interests has been formed composed of the undersigned: A. Jamieston Mason, C. E. Bardsley, C. Lyon Clarke, Frank T. Peckham, W. G. Taylor and S. S. Wood, Jr."

There are more than 50 musicians interested in the movement, including many of Newport's best professional instrumentalists. It is proposed to make it a concert band and the scheme is to have an executive committee which will have the sole management. If the organization is effected it is the plan to limit the membership and this make it necessary to establish a waiting list, so that one will not feel that it is an association of musicians which he can join at will.

The committee has done a great deal of hard work up to date, for it has realized that to organize a successful band in Newport the prime reason among the members must be love for music and the money consideration must be secondary. Many of the local musicians are at present greatly out of practice, not having touched their instruments for months, but if the coming meeting shows the interest which is believed has been worked up the committee is prepared to engage in the serious work of bringing the musicians into a harmonious whole.

THE MONOTONY OF LIFE'S BURDEN.

[Christian Herald.]

Here is another man dragging the burden of the constant commonplace. When life is full of changes the changes themselves may provide a rest. The change brings other muscles into play. It is restful even to lift the eyes away from the detailed work, and allow them to roam our wider space. But some lives are burdened by a fearful monotony. Theirs is the monotony of waking to the unchanging program. There is the monotony of the road to work. Theirs is the monotony of the work itself. There is the monotony of the return; a gray, gray road! Gray, gray, gray, forever gray; never a change to scarlet or blue. Every morning the same gray load on the same gray road, the journey to begin at the metallic stroke of the clock, and at the metallic stroke of the clock to cease. And oh, the sighs that rise along that road! The old, old round! And often it is so hard to drag along; and the ox-like soul staggers and faints.

What shall we say about it? We were never intended to drag along that gray road in the harness of a single collar. Let the man try what will happen if he changes the single collar for the yoke of the Lord. It is not only that the load will become lighter, but the road will become lighter. What a difference a companion makes to one's pilgrimage! I said to a couple of pedestrians, "Did you see Warwick's gloomy prison as you came along?" "No," was the answer; but then they were two lovers, and their absorption in each other made them immune to the gloom! And I might say to many a soul, "Was not that a bit of monotonous road at noon today?" or, "Was not that a wearisome struggle in the evening?" and the answer would be, "I never noticed it, I felt like singing all the time!" But then these people are lovers, and their companion-lover is the Lord. They shared a common yoke, and walked a common road. If my readers want to see what the Lord can do with a monotonous road, let them exchange the collar for the yoke, and "the desert shall rejoice and blossom like the rose."

LOCAL BRIEFS.

—Dr. Henry C. Ecroyd has gone to Meadville, Pa., having received news of the death of his aged father there.

—Miss Jessie L. Dawley of this city was Thursday operated on at the Hospital for Women in Brookline, Mass.

—The pleasant weather and the almost sultry feeling of the air caused the horse carriages to come out in force Thursday afternoon and Bellevue street looked lively.

—In the dramatic reading of "Done in Both Sides," to be given by the Fairy Club, the part of Brownjohn will be taken by Mr. A. O'D. Taylor instead of Mr. J. S. Milne, as originally announced.

—It has been a cold hard, tempestuous winter. No one needs to be told that the point is that today marks the end of four successive weeks of school in the heart of the winter during which children have not lost any time on account of the weather signals.

—A still alarm was rung at 9:15 Thursday evening, Reel 7 and Combination 2 responded to the corner of Thames and Gidley streets, where a fire in the tenement occupied by Mr. Lane had caused the alarm. There was all in the stove.

—A broken water pipe in the cellar of the William Sherman & Co. store on Thames street was found by Officer Cody Thursday night and the Public Works emergency corps had work to do in thawing out the pipe to prevent further loss.

—D. H. Kerr of Duluth, Mich., T. H. Hinxtable, Mr. and Mrs. D. W. Schwood and Harry Schwood of New York; Mr. and Mrs. Walter and T. Mauskire of Boston; J. W. Peter of barkentine Sarah registered at the United States Hotel.

—Manager Wright of the Telephone exchange has supplied the public with 17 maps of the Bell Telephone system in the United States and Canada. It is a comparatively small affair but is interesting in showing the telephone wires of the Bell system and how thoroughly the country is covered.

AINSWORTH TO BE COURT-MARTIALED.

office has been regarded for some time as inevitable, in view of the extremely bitter personal relations which have existed, and particularly since the reorganization scheme reported from the House committee on military affairs, in connection with the pending army appropriation bill, the action of the Secretary of War and the President provides a decided sensation. Never before in the history of the army has the adjutant general been court-martialled.

General Ainsworth's removal is considered the outcome of many years' struggle for control between the line and the staff in the army. General Leonard Wood, chief of staff, leads a contingent which believes control should be vested in those officers actually in touch with the fighting strength. Others, among whom General Ainsworth was a leading figure, have contended that supervision should be vested in the heads of powerful bureaus.

In his letter of suspension Secretary Stimson declares:

"In considering whether these offenses against propriety on your part are merely exceptional cases of rudeness and ill-temper, I find that they have become habitual on your part and have occurred under other administrations of the War Department, and concerning other officers than those of the general staff."

In summing up his letter of suspension Secretary Stimson does not mince words. He says that feeling that he himself was attacked he did not deem himself fit to take judicial action, but laid the entire matter before the President, who ordered that the adjutant general be relieved at once.

"Your present action," says the Secretary in conclusion, "which, because of the prior warning received and the length of time consumed in the preparation of your present memorandum, must be deemed deliberate, is, therefore but the culmination of a series of outbreaks evidencing such intolerance of subordination and such readiness to impugn here the motives and the intelligence of those with whom it is your duty to work in association as, if uncorrected, to destroy your usefulness in your present office.

"It is impossible that the business of government can be properly conducted if official communications are made the occasion for contemptuous comments and assertions upon fellow-officers and for insolence to superiors. Under such circumstances, self-respect would forbid that co-operation which is necessary to effective service."

VALENTINE WHIST.

Card Parties Given by Emma Rebekah Lodge and by Misses Mayer and Sisson.

Emma Rebekah Lodge gave a Valentine whist party at the home of Mrs. Johnstone on Fountain street Thursday evening, the house being decorated for the occasion in Valentine effects. Ten tables were played at whist, the prizes being awarded as follows: First women's, mayonnaise dish, Mrs. Benjamin Barker; second, china bowl and saucer Mrs. James Smith; third, china ink well, Mrs. Lizzie Davis; first men's, a set of six cut glass tumblers, Mr. Benjamin Barker; second, china teapot, Mr. Fred Lundholm; third a cabinet, Mrs Theodore H. Bliss. After the whist a collation was served followed by dancing and vocal selections. Mrs. Mary Henry was in charge of the entertainment, assisted by Mrs. Ida Lundholm of Emma Lodg and Mrs. Davis of Esther Lodge.

Miss Florence Mayer and Miss Gladys Sisson gave a Valentine and whist party to a large number of friends and classmates Wednesday evening at Miss Mayer's home. A number of games were played, several musical selections were rendered and a buffet lunch was served. An interesting feature was a large heart suspended in the centre of the dining room, which when opened showered the guests with smaller hearts and appropriate favors. Prizes were awarded to Messrs. Wheeler, Wilkinson and Wood and Misses Hooper and Leddy. Several dialogues were given during the evenig by Messrs. Bowler and Wright.

A dance and whist was given Thursday evening at Father Mathew hall for the benefit of the building fund of St. Augustin's Church. The hall was decorated with flags and 50 tables were used for the whist. The prizes were awarded to Mrs. William Ebbitt, Miss Elizabeth Regan and Messrs. Frank Horrocks and Alexander O'Hanley. After the whist there was dancing for two hours, the Howard orchestra furnishing the music.

JAMESTOWN.

The members of whist team No. 2 entertained the members of the Bayside Club at a New England supper Thursday evening. After the supper the first round in the third series of whists was played. A new method of drawing was used, there being five members on each team, which are composed of the following players: Team No. 1, A. Tefft, T. McDonald, J. C. Tefft, N. S. Littlefield and J. H. Clarke. Team No. 2 P. Blackwell, G. D. Anthony, J. H. Tefft J. Schleith and F. Anthony, Team No. 3, L. W. Anthony, A. A. Boone, A. Head, W. A. Clarke and W. H. Brooks.

The score for the evening's play was: Team No. 1, 46; Team No. 2, 56; Team No. 3, 46.

Captain James Porter of British brigantine Savata, anchored in Newport harbor awaiting the breaking up of the ice gatetelaw T.-etaolnshdrlu of the ice to tow to Stamford, Conn., is visiting Mr. Job S. Ellis on the North Main road. Captain Porter and Mr. Ellis were boys together in Maitland, Nova Scotia, and had not seen each other for 50 years.

The weekly whist of the P. H. Society was held Thursday evening at the home of Mrs. H. S. Stubbs on Clarke street. Mrs. F. Armbrust and Mrs. J. C. Tefft won the prizes. Refreshments were served.

Mr. Charles Fletcher has sold to John Medeiros a lot of land with cottage, situated on the northerly side of the North Main road.

A large field of ice came down the bay just before noon and passed out to sea. The Dumpling rocks held it for a short time but it soon broke away. The ferryboat was fortunate enough to avoid it on the trip over and back. At 1 o'clock more was in sight coming down and if the wind continues in the present quarter the ferry will be likely to meet its first bad ice of the winter.

Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Fuller of Providence are guests of Captain and Mrs. C. L. Champlin on Ellery avenue.

WARRANT QUASHED.

Complaint Under New Building Law Not Issued by the Chief of Police.

The complaint issued under the new building law, charging four men with erecting a dry and improper wall, for a house foundation on West Broadway, was thrown out in the district court this morning, on a legal technicality. Mr. F. F. Nolan, representing the defendants, asked that the warrant be quashed, on the ground that the complaint was issued by W. J. T. Northup as acting chief of police, whereas the law states that all complaints shall be issued by the chief of police. The question was whether Captain Northup had authority to swear out the warrant as acting chief.

Inspector Tobin said that in the practice in case of the chief's absence, Mr. Nolan said it made no difference; under the building law only the chief of police could issue complaints of this nature.

Judge Franklin said he would need to have some evidence to show that by virtue of the ordinance the duties of chief of police fell to the captain.

City Solicitor Sullivan said there is nothing in the law delegating the authority to issue complaints to any one but the chief. He said, as he understood the law, it was not so much a matter whether the chief or some one else issued the warrants; the object was that the complainant should be a responsible party, good for surety. The court said that is true in general cases, but in actions brought under the new building law the statute is specific as to who shall issue the complaint.

City Solicitor Sullivan was willing to summon the chief to testify that he was out of town an dthat the captain was acting for him. Mr. Nolan said he was ready to admit that.

The motion to quash was granted. It is expected that new warrants will be issued immediately.

The complaint was originally brought by Building Inspector M. D. Sullivan. The defendants are Sultano Nesaida, Abraham Perrin, G. Renilda and John Lyons. The foundation belonged to P. H. Horgan.

POLICE BUSINESS.

Officers in the Patrol Hunt for a Stolen Horse and Buggy, While the Owner Finds Them.

Thursday afternoon Mr. Edward Sturtevant of St. George's school left his horse and buggy on Bellevue avenue, near Levin street, while he went into a store, and when he came out both were gone. He was told that two sailors and a soldier had driven off with them. He notified the police, and securing a bicycle found the outfit on Fir street, in good condition. Thinking it was a case of driving out of town and perhaps killing the horse, the police patrol was called out and Inspector Tobin, Sergeant Conroy and Officer P. D. Sullivan went out in it, while Officers Boreson and Kane chased around on bicycles. It was learned that the horse had strayed from his mooring ground and was seen going down Bath road without a driver, so if the sailors and soldier did take a ride it was a short one. Perhaps there was no ride, but the police had a merry chase.

The police had some business for the court at the station this morning. A woman pleaded guilty to a charge of being a common prostitute and was sent to the state workhouse for six months. Another pleaded guilty to a lewd and wanton charge and was placed on probation, this being the first offence charged to her. A man pleaded guilty to a charge of adultery and paid $20 and costs; and one for assault was fined $10 and costs and did not have the necessary money.

DEATH OF MISS ALICE M. HORNE

News has been received of the death, at her home in Charlottetown, Prince Edward Island, of Miss Alice M. Horne, well known in this city. She was a graduate of the Newport Hospital School for Nurses in the class of 1903 and had been employed since in Newport, having been for the greater part of the time engaged on one case. A little less than a year ago she left to visit her home, and on her return underwent an operation at the hospital. Her health had steadily failed and she returned to her home, where she underwent a second operation a few days ago, but failed to rally.

Miss Horne was a woman of specially charming disposition, which attracted friendships wherever she was known, and this disposition and her knowledge of her profession made her a successful nurse.

THE JAMES-DUNCAN ROADWAY AGREEMENT.

An agreement between Commodore Arthur Curtiss James and Mr. Stuart Duncan has been filed at the city clerk's office for record. It arranges for the enlarged roadway which is to improve the present rather narrow driveway to the shore between the Duncan and Clark estates, leading from Harrison avenue at the turn near Mrs. Clarke's gate. The south end of the road is to be widened five feet north to a point 130 feet distant from the shore, where the widening is to be 20 feet. This land comes from Mr. Duncan's estate an dis to be thrown into the roadway, which is to be used jointly by the two estates for going to the landing. None of the trees are to be destroyed without consent of Mr. Duncan and provision is made in case either estate passes from the present family that the other party will have the right to buy the remaining interest, so that either right need not pass to another without virtual consent to the agreement.

THE LOCAL COAL SITUATION.

Still a Supply on Hand, But Dealers Find It Difficult or Impossible to Replenish Stocks.

Perhaps people have noticed the superabundance of coal wagons on the streets for a number of weeks past. Scarcely could one look about on Thames street without seeing a coal wagon going or coming, and throughout the city the dealers have been busy—so busy that extra teams and men have been hired to keep the coal going out as fast as consumers desired it.

Probably few looked into the harbor to see how much coal was coming in to replace that which the drivers were so energetically carting to cellars and other consuming places. The dealers all had good stocks at the beginning of the cold season, but the consumption since January 1 has been enormous and they have been unable even approximately to replace that which has been sent out. There is still coal on hand, but the outlook is none too good. The dealers do not know where they are to obtain more to replace that going out, and that the price is up to stay for some time at least is evident from the shortage.

Even the Newport Coal Company, which has an advantage over the other local dealers in having its own fleet of towboats and barges for freighting, is feelingthe effects of the shortage. Manager Hayes states that it is a case of taking what one can get and not of ordering what one wants. For some sizes it is found impossible to have orders filled and this condition is likely to grow worse rather than better as the cold weather continues, and until after April 1 or later.

Conditions are worse in other places than here, Newport being perhaps as favorably situated as any. The dearth of supplies is not confined to hard coal; soft coal is also short and unless there is an improvement in navigation it promises to be shorter. This is due to the difficulties of transportation, while the shortage in the hard coal market is due to a lack of stock, exhausted by the unprecedented drain of the present extraordinarily severe winter.

SOME SNOW AND WARMER.

Temperature Above the Freezing Mark and the Ice All Out of the Harbor.

The snowstorm arrived all right. It reached here some time during the night, for at 5 o'clock this morning the ground was covered by a white carpet. It was snowing some at 9, and a few flakes at noon; then the sun came out for a brief visit and retired. A few flakes fluttered in the air at 1:30, but soon thereafter there was nothing in the way of snow but some melting. The wind was from the northeast and beginning to take on a chill, though the temperature was above the freezing mark. It was above that mark all night, and while it has not boomed very high today it has been in the melting and not the freezing section of the scale.

The ice left the harbor Thursday afternoon. In the morning, after the northwest wind had driven it all into the section about King Park and the Gas Company's wharf, the boys were able to walk out past Little Lime Rock. Then the wind shifted to southeast and the ice drifted across to the Torpedo Station and went to sea. It has not been seen since.

THE GALAHAD VALENTINE DANCE.

The Galahad Club gave a Valentine dance at the Trinity guild hall with a large attendance. The decorations were appropriate to St. Valentine's day, red and white electric lights in long strings being arranged, with long groups of lights around hearts and red and white streamers being also effectively employed in profusion. Screens were used, having red hearts and cupids as their special decorations. Mrs. Stanley C. Hughes, Miss Clara Ennis and Mrs. Edward O. Brown were the chaperones. The committee in charge consisted of Messrs. Charles Wernquest, Thomas Aldred, Philip Robinson and Lloyd Curtis. The decorations were planned and arranged by Messrs. Edward Gladding and Thomas Aldred, who were assisted by Messrs. Charles Wernquest and Norman Fludder. Music for dancing was furnished by Knowe's orchestra.

THE CHARM OF THE WOODS

One Goes There to Experience Feelings of Unbounded Liberty.

The Hunt for Berries and Nuts Is Bound to Bring a Sure and Substantial Reward

[Providence Sunday Tribune.]

An impression prevails among the majority of men that no enjoyment can be had in the woods unless one goes out to kill something. Such a viewpoint is equivalent to calling the shadow the real thing. One goes to the woods to experience feelings of unbounded, unrestricted liberty, to hear the soughing of the wind in the treetops or to watch hurrying waters rush noisily over the brook's pebble-strewn bottom, to fall with the sound of muffled thunder over some small cataract into silent pools below, where lurks the wary trout; or to let the eye survey with intense satisfaction the shifting panorama of hill and valley, of monarchical tree trunks and moss-grown rocks topped by the azure sky, against which in widening circles soars the spying hawk. Primitive instincts fallow and dormant spring to life and intoxicate as with a drink of old wine—the lure of the wild is the charm and not the killing of a few innocent wood dwellers.

Who would enjoy killing rabbits or a city lot or who would be so degenerate as to find pleasure in shooting deer in a park? The hunt for berries and nuts brings just as many thrills and has the same associations that hunting for wild game has. Moreover, the reward is sure and substantial if one is a good hunter.

Of the wild nuts the hazelnut ripens first. The hazel is a bush three or four feet high, most commonly found in the edge of woods and along stone walls in wooded sections. The nut makes a brave appearance when growing, but it is so well liked by mice, chipmunks and squirrels that it is almost impossible to get them when ripe, for they are immediately snapped up by those rodents. The nuts are very small and altogether they are not worth much. The European hazel grows 20 feet high and yields very large nuts.

The beech tree, one of the finest forest trees in existence, occurs here sparingly and always in the neighborhood of water. The beech nuts are three-cornered affairs of the same appearance as chestnuts, but small and hard to find. Hickory nuts, erroneously called walnuts, are rather plentiful here.

There are four kinds of hickories to be found within the boundaries of the state. The nuts of the different species vary but little and that mostly in size. They are all distinguished by hard, thick shells and smallness of kernel, differing in this respect from the true walnuts, which have thinner shells and larger kernels.

The hickory is a large, important tree of the forest, furnishing excellent hard wood, used for a variety of purposes. In years when the nuts are plentiful one can pick a bushel in a very short time when acquainted with the locality where they grow.

The black walnut (Juglans Nigra) and the white or papershell walnut (Juglans Alba) are not indigenous to Rhode Island. In trips through the countryside one will see many stately black walnuts planted on the farms. The nuts are as large and round as small apples.

The butternut (Juglans Cinerea) is another member of the walnut family that grows here sparingly. Its right home is much farther north.

Four specimens of oak (Quercus), red, black, white and chestnut oak, produce large crops of acorns which are greatly appreciated by such four-footed hogs of the state as are allowed to roam in the woods. Boys profess to like the acorns of the post oak, which are not quite so bitter and astringent as the other kinds, but seldom do they ask for a second helping.

The chestnut (Castanea) occupies first place among the nut bearing trees of the state. In favorable seasons the yield is very great and one can pick a bushel of the nuts in the course of a day. Boiled or roasted the native chestnut is way ahead of its European cousin, which, while larger, is almost tasteless, being in this respect but little better than the product of the buckeye or horse chestnut.

In the month of August, when the swamps are dry, enter any one down in the south part of the state. The main floor of the swamp is a perfectly dry, long white moss in which your feet sink up to the ankle and which forms a carpet at once a wonder and a delight, and a sight not to be seen every day.

On all sides rise from the white carpet sea, as if they were little islands, foot-high tussocks; the footstools of the great blackberry bushes, whose fruit-laden crowns spread over your head like immense umbrellas. But the undergrowth is too dense and thick here; it would take too much time to bend the tops down through the tangle of inter-grown brush, so you pass on and emerge presently into an open glade, grass-grown in the centre. Great berry bushes hang with loaded branches around the edge of this open space—clearly this is where you commence.

With a two-quart pail hung on your suspender button you rattle the blue globes off at the rate of—let us see—yes! 20 minutes exactly to fill the pail, or a quart every 10 minutes; that's good picking. And what glorious berries they are! The refined product of a virgin soil, and not cultivated inflations, forced along to maturity by German potash or domestic animal offal.

The sun is mounting higher, it is getting warm. You step out in the grass to avoid a protruding bush, something twists and—next instant a big black snake flies hissing in the air, his black, ugly head on a level with yours, and only an arm's length away.

With a convulsive movement you execute a sidelong backward spring that speaks well for your agility and, well, you are aware that the black snake is not poisonous, but that he is, nevertheless a pugnacious fighter, quick as greased lightning—that he can bite like a cat almost, and that his power as a constrictor is such that should he happen to get a few coils around your neck it would be all off. You don't like snakes, anyway, and that is why your hair is standing on end and hot and cold chills chase themselves along your backbone.

A waving movement in the grass gives you relief. It tells you his snakeship is gliding away. You spilled your pailful of berries when you jumped away from the snake, and now, before you pick any more, you cut yourself a stout cudgel; with this in your hand you search the ground before you put your foot down in obscured places.

As you pick you advance further in knee swamp with eyes and ears alert to detect the slightest movement or sound of a suspicious character. You start at the snapping of a twig or shy at the sight of each twisted, contorted root. You avoid the black holes that run under tussock and root, and once when you stepped on a dead branch half buried in the moss and the other end leaped up, black and suggestive, you nearly jumped out of your skin.

The westering sun lengthens the shadows, evening is approaching. As if to emphasize this fact the hoarse hoot of an owl booms out with startling distinctness through the wide reaches of the swamp.

You hastily snatch out your watch—5 o'clock!—and the train leaves at 6:30. It took you 20 minutes to cover the distance from the station that morning, and you have now two baskets of berries to carry—clearly it has to be a mild imitation of a marathon race. Grabbing both baskets you throw caution to the wind and go crashing through the brush like a bull moose in the rutting season.

Short of breath and perspiring freely you arrive at the station four minutes before the train's leaving time, and—presto! In less than no time you are home. Net results, two baskets of berries, you've forgotten the count, but think it's 36 quarts, an appetite that would make a full grown ostrich stick his head in the sand from pure envy, and besides, a brand-new snake story to add to the season's long list of such.

Later on, in the month of September, you awake to the realization some day that your annual supply of wild grapes must be gathered, and that right speedily too. Taking the first train out one morning, you disembark at the station where you expect to obtain the best results. Half an hour's tramp brings you to a burway leading into extensive meadows and pastures. Throwing your basket across, you vault lightly over the bars—ah! something is moving out there in the meadow.

Peering out between the bushes you behold two woodchucks sitting bolt upright—two animated interrogation marks who have heard but not yet seen you. You stop to view the pretty creatures a moment, and then step lightly out, when they scurry away into their holes for dear life.

You lay your course for the head waters of a stream that meanders through the country for many miles until it empties in the bay. The source of this stream is a spring that gushes out of a cliff in the rocks at the foot of a hill.

Ah! here it is, the spring; from a cocoanut shell you quaff draught after draught of the sparkling water until you find yourself in the same fix as the boy at the picnic who, upon being urged to have another piece of cake, declined plaintively with the exclamation, "No, thanks! I can eat more, but I can't swallow it!"

Your eyes go roving among the vines that are festooned on the bushes and trees on both sides of the brook—ah! see how they hang in great big bunches. You unlimber and start picking, following the brook as you go along.

No one has been there ahead of you and you have your choice of the largest ones there. One basket is filled in a jiffy. You come to a pool over which grows a good-sized maple. A big grape vine drapes the maple with monstrous bunches of grapes. Convenient branches make the tree easy to climb. You are soon ensconsed in the top with your basket resting in the forks of two branches.

It is almost full when you espy a cluster of superb bunches growing at the end of the vine, way over the pool. You must have them at any cost. You edge out carefully, your hand touches the nearest bunch when—crack! crack! goes the branch you are standing on. Clutch as you may at vines and branches, down, down you go into the pool with a splash.

Luckily you land top side up, but the rain of grapes that descends on you with accurate aim, tells you that the basket landed bottom side up. Nothing phased by this little sideplay which is all in the game, you scramble out with the empty basket—the grapes have sunk to the bottom. After a little wringing and wiping you are as good as new, and in spite of the little setback you had the baskets are full to overflowing in another hour or so.

Your next move is to pick out a smooth level piece of ground on which you spread some newspapers to receive the grapes you now proceed to dump out. After eating your lunch you start to pick the grapes off the stems, sort out the imperfect fruit, etc. While engaged with this tedious work a gray squirrel is barking angrily at you from a near-by treetop. He does not eat grapes himself, but he resents the liberties you are taking in his domains.

Once you hear a crashing, stamping, noise in the brush. Looking up hastily you behold a big buck headed directly for you. You shout, and he wheels suddenly, only to cast on you such a look of unutterable scorn, that even the war-like expression of Kaiser Wilhelm would seem bland and childlike in comparison. He gives a snort, a shake of the antlered head and bounds away at right angles to his former course.

Your task of picking over the grapes is completed after a while. You find that the baskets are not quite full now, so you hunt around for the largest bunches you can find to top off with. There is yet several hours to dispose of before train time; they are passed in nature study and in hunting for chestnuts.

At last you get home about sunset, tired but supremely content with your day in the woods among the grapes.

NEW YORK CUTS SMALL FIGURE.

Empire State Has No Power in Democratic National Conventions.

The Senatorial Burying Ground—Congressman Underwood's Logic—A Temperance Judge.

[Washington correspondence of The News.]

WASHINGTON, Feb. 15.—New York is always a nonentity in Democratic national conventions. It is never for anybody and doesn't even present an acceptable candidate for Vice President. New York cuts no figure in the present consideration of a candidate. The state is to be tied up and delivered when the time comes, for whom no one can say, but presumably for some man who cannot be nominated. New York Democrats were lamenting about this situation and Congressman Fitzgerald made it more apparent by adding a little ridicule to the situation by proposing a Presidential ticket in which New York figures.

"We will nominate Kern of Indiana and O'Gorman of New York," said the Brooklyn Congressman, "and our motto will be 'We win with whiskers.' There is a ticket that ought to command strength, and it has the endorsement of Mr. Bryan."

Strange as it may seem, there are people who think that when the final test comes the Bryan strength in the Democratic convention is to be turned over to Kern, O'Gorman in second place, it is said, would win back the Catholic vote, which has strayed from the Democratic fold.

"That is the ozone of Democracy," remarked Congressman Garrett of Tennessee, commenting upon the wordy contest in the Democratic caucus. It was the caucus, by the way, which turned down Bryan's suggestion as to how the money trust should be investigated; and, looking back over the procedure of the Democratic House, it must be noted that many times his advice has not been heeded by that party. And that makes us inquire whether he will dominate the national convention, as so often predicted.

It is doubtful if Senator Smoot ever hears the last of his attempt to bury certain very much alive and active members of the Senate. As chairman of the joint committee on printing he sent to secretaries of state an inquiry for information about the various Senators who have represented the commonwealth. This inquiry embraced the living as well as the dead, but unfortunately a clerk neglected to strike out the question, "Where is he interred?" in the case of the former.

In the cloakroom several of the victims, all Democrats, were rallying each other.

"Where are you interred?" asked the Senator from Arkansas of the Senator from Georgia.

"In the committee on private land claims," answered Senator Bacon, that being the committee of which he is chairman.

"And I," said Senator Clarke ruefully, "in the committee on the disposition of useless papers in the executive departments."

"Never mind," said Senator Tillman with a flash of his old time vigor. "Look out for us after next November, when we shall all cast off our shrouds."

Said Senator Atlee Pomerene of Ohio, "If a burglar got into the cellar would the coal chute?" Replied Senator John Martine of New Jersey, "No, but the kindling wood."

"There is little incentive these days for a man to try to lay aside for a rainy day," said Senator Brown after reading President Taft's recent message concerning anti-monopoly.

"The Bible says, 'Put not your trust in riches,' and the President says, 'Put not your riches in trusts.' I guess I'll have to do as I have always done and spend mine as I get it."

Congressman Underwood says he can't stop to explain all the intricate things contained in a tariff measure before pushing it to a vote.

"It may sound contradictory and confusing, but study will show that it is not so. For instance, it is supposed that men have a great advantage over animals. But suppose a horse runs away with a man. The man is likely to be laid up for six or eight weeks. Suppose a man runs away with a horse. Then the man is likely to be laid up for six or eight years. You see, it requires study to understand these details."

A man was discussing the qualifications of a Western judge with Senator Bailey. "I would rather be tried for murder before him than for bootlegging," remarked the Texas Senator.

Which meant that the judge was an earnest supporter of the crusade against the sale of liquor.

ARE YOUR KIDNEYS SICK?

Many Newport People Have Kept Well By Keeping Their Kidneys Well.

The first symptom of kidney trouble may be only a slight pain in the back, a feeling of stiffness or soreness in the loins, or some annoying irregularity of the urinary passages. Urine is discolored and sediment gathers upon standing. Next comes a dull, throbbing backache, sharp, knife-like pains, headaches, dizziness and usually lameness when arising in the morning. No one can afford to delay until these troubles become serious. Begin using Doan's Kidney Pills, the tried and tested kidney remedy that has cured thousands. Newport readers should find convincing proof of merit in the following statement. It's from a resident of this locality.

W. H. Ackers, 7 Farewell St., Newport, R. I., says: "My kidneys were weak and the kidney secretions were too frequent in passage and contained sediment. There were pains through my sides and loins and I felt badly in every way. I finally used Doan's Kidney Pills procured at Wright & Hay's Drug Store, and I was soon free from kidney complaint."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

The Employed Boys won from the Comedians, 28 to 22, in a fast game of basket ball at the Young Men's Christian Association gymnasium Thursday evening. The play was close and interesting and neither team had a decided advantage until the end. When time was called for the first half the Comedians led 12 to 10, but in the second half the Employed Boys, playing better, overcame their opponents and pulled out ahead, scoring 18 points to eight by the Comedians. Wyllie, Ottilege and Kelley did the best work for the winners and Egan and Hook were the stars for the Comedians. The line-up and summary are as follows:

At the end of the first half the score was 7 to 2 in favor of the Klu Klux Klan and in the second half the Point team added two points to its score while the Klu Klux were making 12. The fine defense of Integlia and Nason, the Klu Klux Klan backs, was mainly responsible for the small score made by the Pointers. Nason and Gifford were also strong on the offense, scoring more than half the points made by the winners. The line-up and summary:

Klu Klux Klan	Point A. C.
Dennison, r. f.	l. b. Owens

MIDDLETOWN.

Large Attendance at the Brown University Quartet Concert, Preceded by a Supper.

(Regular correspondence to the News.)

The rendition of the Brown University Quartet having preceded them, their first appearance in Middletown called out a large and appreciative audience at the Methodist Episcopal Church Thursday evening. The program of 10 numbers was considerably enlarged by encores, in some cases two and three, the singers responding generously to the repeated applause. College songs, whether sung in public or private, seem always to prove "catchy" and this entertainment proved no exception to the rule. The program was as follows:

"Medley of Brown songs," quartet, with the number Mr. Walker, acting as soloist; encore unaccompanied, "Josh's Mule"; reading, Mr. Walker, "Mike Franks on the Professor"; encore, "The Deaf Old Lady"; quartet unaccompanied, "Women"; encore, a college boy's rendition of "I stood on the Bridge at Midnight," solo, "Three for Jack," Mr. Leith; encore, "Why not ask me"? Mrs. Fred P. Webber acting as accompanist; quartet, "Rockin' in de Win' "; encore, "The Beautiful Doll"; reading, Mr. Walker, "Rube in the City"; encore, "Ode to Spring"; quartet, "The Hobble-de Boy," solo part by Mr. Leigh with humming accompaniment and quartet chorus; encore, "Hurrah for Brown"; solo, Mr. Holding, "The Morn"; encore, "Mighty Lak a Rose," Mrs. Webber accompanying; reading, Mr. Walker, "The Schoolboy's Essay"; encore, "A Modern Omar Khayyam" in song; second encore, popular hits set to music, with an "imitation of a cannon" as a third encore; quartet, "Thanksgiving in the Country"; encore, "Life is a Merry-Go-Round." This abounded in popular hits and in responses to two encores added verses were given. The audience still proving insatiable, the closing song, "Old Brown," to the tune of "The Old Oaken Bucket," was sung as a finale.

The quartet included Royal W. Leith, first tenor; John T. Walker, Jr., second tenor; Harold A. Myers, first bass, and Robert S. Holden, Jr., second bass. Mr. Walker acted in the triple capacity of singer, reader and pianist. The men were entertained at the Methodist parsonage by Rev. and Mrs. E. E. Wells, and by Mr. and Mrs. John H. Anthony near the church.

The entertainment was the third in the winter course given under the auspices of the Epworth League and was preceded by a "dime supper," which included brown bread and beans, potato salad, meat loaf, white bread, cake, tea, and coffee. This was conducted by the members of the Ladies' Aid, Mrs. Mary W. Lawton president. The waitresses, young women of the parish, wore double red hearts and the table napkins bore a border of roses with pink hearts interspersed. Supper was served from six tables, seating from eight to 12 each, which were arranged about the dining hall. A large corps of helpers assisted in the kitchen.

Owing to numerous social events scheduled for the latter part of February, the men's turkey supper has been postponed from the Washington's birthday season to the early part of March, when there will be a moon. The Ladies' Aid is planning to observe Washington's birthday in a small informal manner.

Mr. Benjamin Howland of Boston is guest for a few days of Mr. and Mrs Restcom S. Peckham on Green End avenue.

Mr. Christopher Peckham, elder son of Mr. and Mrs. J. Oscar Peckham, is at home for a week's vacation. He is associated with an uncle who is a druggist at New Brunswick, N. J.

Huge piles of block ice are being heaped on either side of the town pond, owing to the fact that the houses are all full. Some of the ice Wednesday was estimated to be 19 inches thick. That on the west side belongs to Frasch, who has boarded it in and attempted to cover it partially with sailcloth. The addition to his icehouse being also full necessitated stacking outside. The pond, even the channel, is frozen over and the men still continue to cut daily.

A large bay window front is being added to "Seacroft," Honyman Hill, the summer residence of Mr. Livingood of Cincinnati, Mrs. T. J. Emery's secretary.

The town was visited by a light attack of the "Valentine fever" Wednesday, via the mail during the day and by male and female "knocking parties" in the evening, similar to the hanging of May baskets.

Aquidneck Grange was invited to attend Portsmouth Grange Thursday evening, the initiation in the third and fourth degrees being followed by a Valentine party. The Brown University Glee Club entertainment prevented a general acceptance of the invitation.

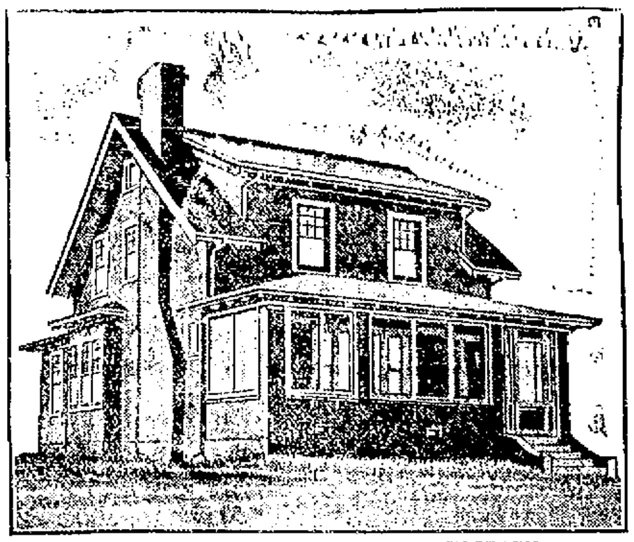

ARIZONA AND THE RECALL.

[Boston Transcript.]

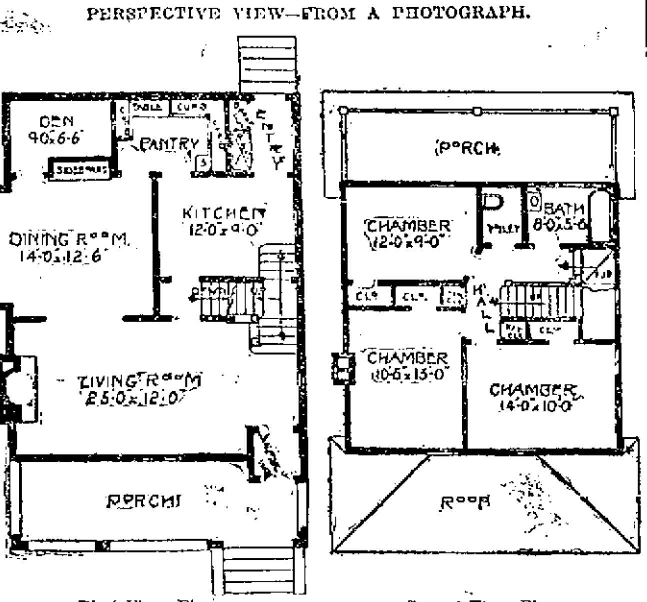

Now that Arizona has become a sovereign state it may put back into the constitution the provision for the recall of judges which delayed its admission to the Union. There is really no constitutional obstacle in the way of Arizona doing this, if it is still of its original opinion that it is wise to upset a bench of judges every time a court renders a decision that a good many people do not like.

ENGINEERS SEEK MORE PAY.

Text of Demands Made on the New Haven Railroad Involves Large Increase.

The text of the demands handed to the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad Company by the heads of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers show that an increase of wages is asked for both passenger and freight engineers, based on capacity of engines on a sliding scale. Double pay is demanded for overtime, involving a large increase over the old rates.

The demands are the same as those of the concerted movement of engineers which covers some 60 lines east of the Mississippi and north of the Chesapeake & Ohio, and involves about 25,000 engineers. On the part of the railroads the matter is now in the hands of a special committee appointed by representatives of the company and the negotiations are expected to last several months.—TODAY.

ORIGIN OF THE IRISH BULL.

[London Chronicle.]

It is a mistake to regard "bulls" as essentially Irish. If we can accept Grose's tracing of the word to Obadiah Bull, a blundering London lawyer in the reign of Henry VII. But the eighteenth century authority upon slang was given to such personal derivations. "Dun," for instance, he derived from Joe Dun of Lincoln, another worthy of Henry VII's time, and has no doubt that "cant" came from Andrew Cant, a notorious Scottish preacher. Grose believed in a real Jack Robinson, who always went away before one had time to address him by his name. And, although he dismissed the derivation of "dumps" from Dumpus, king of Egypt, he held that galoshes were "Goliath's shoes."

THE CATALPA FRAUD.

Only Reliable Nursery Firms Should be Patronized by Would-Be Growers of Trees.

[Rochester Union and Advertiser.]

Probably most of us will be surprised to learn from a notice given by the state conservation commission that the catalpa is not the best and most of trees. For of late years we have been told in all kinds of print that reach the public that the catalpa is the quickest and easiest growing of trees, that it is a thing of beauty in the landscape and that it will furnish telegraph poles and fence posts galore. But now we are told that we must take a more conservative view of this tree, to say the least. There have been many attempts to make the catalpa popular in the East and it is well that the commission sends out the warning in time, for so great is the enterprise of those Westerners who sent their governors to us to tell us of the glories of their country that they might before long have unloaded thousands of their catalpas upon us.

In sending out its bulletin the commission prefaces it with a warning of the Agricultural Experiment Station of Ohio against fraudulent tree agents who are selling not only catalpas of inferior stock but other seedlings as catalpas, and that at a price far above the market price of first-class catalpa, besides making false representations as to its growth. The Ohio bulletin advises that only reliable nursery firms be patronized by those who would grow catalpas. Our own commission declares it does not wish to discredit catalpa speciosa as to its good qualities, which are durability and fast growth. Neither does it wish to discourage planting of this species where soil and climatic conditions are favorable. But—and here is where the would-be grower will do well to give heed—it is a fact that catalpa is sensitive to frost and exacting as to soil and moisture requirements.

The bulletin continues: "Even where plantations have been exposed to strong cold or dry winds a marked check in growth has been noticed, similar to results where this tree has been planted on poor, sandy soil. Unless the most favorable conditions are present, this tree makes a crooked and limby trunk, not productive of good saw timber and only adapted for use as fence posts and stakes. For this reason the conservation commission has not seen fit to distribute catalpa speciosa for forestry purposes. The corresponding, favorable conditions which are found in Ohio, are limited in New York state to the Hudson valley, south of Kingston, and the fruit belt, along Lake Ontario."

EATING IN MINING CAMPS.

[E. Ecob, in Outing.]

Eating at a temporary mining camp isn't altogether attractive. The array of blackened lard pails steaming about the hearth, and the ribs of beef, picked nearly bare, on the table, may not at first sight seem alluring. But you'll find that the frijoles (strong red Mexican beans), and the cold sour-doughs, flaked with black from the pan, and the strong tea don't taste so bad, after all. Maybe you think you couldn't eat from battered tin plates, with battered black forks that taint the food amid a litter of saddles, soiled mattresses, rifles and tobacco juice. But, then, perhaps you thought you couldn't eat the syrup from which you had picked out flies and ants, or wash in that lard bucket of pale gray minewater the cook brought you, with the little pieces of raw meat afloat near the bottom. All that's really necessary for perfect enjoyment is a good appetite and every one has that in the Southwest.

Any way, as an old prospector said: "There's plenty for all, folks We don't set out to starve, none."

LACQUER FURNITURE.

History of the Ware Begins With Its Discovery by Europe About 1665.

Good Pieces Are More Difficult to Obtain Than Contemporary Colonial Styles.

[New York Evening Post.]

Are you in quest of the day's countersign of the big army of antique furniture collectors? If so, you need not seek it long, for there is no secret about it. It is "lacquer."

Lacquer furniture is the most intricate international complication of the old furniture world. It is a subject that most of the tacticians of the collector's campaigns—those who write books about old furniture, what it is, where it came from, its ancestors and descendants, what became of it, where to get it, and how to buy it—prefer to let alone. Just why they shun the subject it is hard to say, for it is full of history, and has to do with a most ancient and fascinating art. It has been neglected by writers on American furniture with reason, for although its period of popularity in England was long, it was somewhat of a luxury, and little of it found its way to the American colonies, and it is doubtful if such of it as did get over here stayed very long in use, for the American climate is deadly to its decorations and our ancestors probably had not learned how to fortify it against hostile climates as the dealers do today. English authors speak of it more frequently, but never with the volumes of attention they give to Elizabethan, Jacobean and Georgian work. Possibly this is because it was somewhat of an exotic in England, although made there for many years, but even then, for part of this time, with more or less assistance from outside the British Isles, notably from the Far East or from Holland.

It is said that the art of lacquer decoration was employed in China before the Christian era. Another statement of the antiquarians is that in Japan it began in the third century A. D. However, for the present purposes of its collectors, its history begins with the discovery by Europe about 1665, and is still in the making, for it was discovered by America some time during the Taft era, or about 1910 or 1911, and at the present date such of the ware as is not already in the United States or in British museums, or in the possession of old-fashioned British collectors and owners who have not yet acquired the modern English propensity for exchanging old English furniture for new American money, is in transit in this direction as fast as the American dealers can discover it over there and ship it over here.

Its sojourn in the American shops is always brief, for its collectors are always alert, and the dealers are willing, and the prices are not yet prohibitive. In fact, the prices often are remarkably low, as prices frequently go in the antique furniture business when a fad is raging. A tour of the New York shops reveals the presence of several excellent specimens illustrative of the various transformations through which the art of lacquering passed under English influence and environment.

England's interest in lacquer was sharply divided into periods. From 1665 to 1690 it brought its supplies from the Orient, some of it through Holland. From 1690 to 1750 it made its own or bought it in Holland. England's interest in making it did not terminate abruptly in 1750, but that date is as good as any for declaring the lacquer period officially closed. Chippendale subsequently designed pieces "for Japan," by which he meant that they were to be adorned with lacquer, and there was a temporary revival of the art, then called "Japanning," by Adam and Heppelwhite. There is now another revival of lacquer manufacture in England, but this particular branch of the modern antique industry is really quite respectable, although naturally abhorred by the reactionaries of the collector party. However, the lacquer replica of today is by most experts considered to be every bit as good artistically as the English or Dtuch-made antique of the eighteenth century, and usually it is better structurally. Also, it is frankly offered as modern and often selected from photographs on this side, and made to order on the other.

Oriental lacquer came from China, where the ornament is traced in gold in very low relief; from Japan where the ornament is modelled in raised gesso and then gilded; and from Korea, where the first coating is cut or incised and the second layer is applied on the incised parts but without filling them. England adopted the three methods. It should not be supposed that the glossy surface of lacquer is accomplished by the use of varnish. It is produced by the actual polishing of the lacquer as it is put on a layer at a time. Europe's first importations of Oriental lacquer were mainly huge cabinets and chests or screens, but the Oriental forms of household furniture were poorly adapted to the requirements of the English house. For this reason and because the secret of producing the best Oriental lacquer decoration was not immediately acquired by Europe, large imported panels were sometimes cut up in England and used for the decoration of furniture made there, or the furniture was constructed in England and sent to China or Japan to be decorated.

The Dutchmen of the last quarter of the seventeenth century were better traders, or perhaps better statesmen than their English neighbors, for they were able to retain for themselves the open door in the East, while English efforts to trade there were vigorously discouraged if not absolutely forbidden for many years by the Orientals. This explains why so much of English lacquer came from Holland and why the work of manufacturing it gained headway in Holland earlier than in England. When the first huge Chinese chests reached England it was found that they were clumsy things to use except for people accustomed to sit on the floor. Therefore the English cabinet makers early devised heavy standards or bases for them.

One of the earliest and most interesting specimens of Anglo-Oriental "use" is a cabinet of this character. The cabinet has doors closing over 10 small drawers and is decorated inside and outside. The keyholes are upside down according to the ideas of the Western world, one of the sure signs of Chinese origin. There is a large supply of hardware on the chest with fine large hinges to each door and elaborate corner pieces and lock plates. The design of the English stand is in the period of Charles II, with profuse gilded carvings. The cabinet and stand are valued at $1,550, the value being increased by the composite character of the piece, with its Eastern cabinet and Western stand.

England's interest in Oriental lacquer arose not only from its admiration for the work in itself, but also because it furnished so appropriate a setting for the Japanese porcelains and other art objects which were the favorite hobbies of the art collectors of those days. William and Mary favored the furniture with their approval and interest, and probably caused much of it to be brought in from Holland. Queen Mary in particular encouraged the craze, which took such a strong hold upon the public that it became a fashionable form of home art work, and there is an interesting record of one energetic individual who guaranteed to teach young ladies the art of lacquering in 12 lessons, although it may often have required as many months for the professional workers to produce a single good piece.

Black was the favorite color of the lacquer, but other colors, such as green, red, blue, buff and violet were employed. The red was especially valued. The decorations were composed of what was then known as "silver dust, green gold, dirty gold, powder tin and copper." In the best English work the backgrounds were brilliant and hard both inside and outside the cabinets and desks, the ornament was highly raised, and the modeling was sharp. The English at first followed the Chinese patterns of pierced handles, lock plates and corners, but not after 1710.

It was at this time during Queen Anne's reign, that England finally launched out for itself and declared its independence of the Oriental and Dutch supplies, although fine pieces from Holland, China and Japan long after continued to arrive in England. When England took up the art in earnest it applied the lacquer form of decoration to the English styles of furniture and used handles and escutcheons of the best English metal work. Lacquer was frequently applied to furniture already completed or actually in use, and even sometimes to pieces veneered in expensive woods.

One of the finest specimens of lacquer now seen in New York is a secretary or desk, early Queen Anne in every detail of its design, with Dutch legs and the broken pediment on the top. It has three drawers in its base, a folding top for the desk proper, with two small sliding candle brackets above, and the upper or cabinet section has the conventional two doors. The piece was made and decorated in England and is valued today at $650. It would cost much more except that extensive repairs have been necessary, including one entire door for the upper part.

A chest, probably one of those made in England and shipped to China to have the lacquer applied there, valued at $625, is of English construction, and measures 4 feet 7½ inches long, 25 inches deep, and 3 feet 5 inches high. A commode or chest of drawers about 3 feet 9 inches high, in red lacquer, with typical Oriental landscapes in the decorations and a swell or curved front, is probably of the later Queen Anne days. A cabinet or stand with glass doors and a perforated rail around the top was made and decorated in England.

Lacquer grandfather clocks can still be had now. One in green lacquer, strongly marked with Queen Anne characteristics, made in England, and with works bearing the name of William Gibbs, London, is held at $400. Twice as much is asked for a "grandfather" made in Amsterdam about 1760, in perfect running order and in fairly good condition otherwise. Another specimen, somewhat in need of repairs, has English works and a Dutch case.

One New York woman is now attempting to assemble a complete bedroom suite in lacquer. Her first acquisition was a magnificent old four-poster bed, clearly of Chippendale's time, and probably executed under his orders. It is wonderfully wing decorations, with minute details faithfully depicted on the panels of the footboard, and the panel and borders of the headboard. The headboard extends all the way to the cornice, much of it being of typical Chinese lattice-work, which is also seen in the footboard. This lattice-work is made up of many small Chinese pieces mortised together. The posts are carved down to leave several outstanding ornaments which are decorated with gilt.

BEGGARS WITH FORTUNES.

Greeks and Armenians Reluctantly Spend Any of Their Hoard Obtained in America.

Not many persons would go to the municipal lodging house in search of men with fortunes. Yet it is surprising the number of fortunes which pass through this building on the way to Armenia, Greece, Smyrna and Italy. Said William C. Yorke, superintendent of the institution:

"Take an Irishman, an American or an Englishman, who, after hard work and years of deprivation, finds himself in possession of a comfortable capital, and he will live with all the luxury which his income will justify, if not a little better. But not so the Greeks and Armenians.

"I have discovered men seeking a night's free lodging here when they could well afford to stay at any of the city's best hotels. In most cases they have become rich in the United States and are returning to their native lands. They close up business a day or two before the date on which their vessel departs, and rather than spend a few dollars of their hoard they come here to stay for the last two nights in America.

"This means a needless expense to the city and may deprive some man really in need of lodging. I keep a man continually looking for these persons who try to impose upon us. He follows a suspicious person from the time he enters the building until he has stripped off his clothes and taken his shower bath. Many are discovered when they are told to undress. All lodgers must have their clothing sent to the fumigating plant before they are allowed to enter the dormitories. If a man refuses to let his clothes be taken from him we immediately suspect him and search all his pockets. Sometimes we find several thousands of dollars in bills sewed into the lining of his vest. There was such a case last December.

"Shortly before that an Armenian and two children applied for a night's lodging. He said he was going back to Europe and that he had just enough money to pay for his passage in the steerage. He willingly gave up his clothes to be fumigated, but when he learned that he must take a shower bath he immediately developed a painful case of rheumatism in his left arm. He held it stiffly at his side and told the attendants that the doctor had warned him not to get the arm wet for fear of catching cold in it.

"While he had been undressing one of the attendants had noticed that he fumbled in one of his pockets and after looking rather sheepishly about had carried his hand quickly to his left armpit.

"'Let me examine the arm,' said the attendant," taking hold of it gently just above the elbow.

"The Armenian winced, but the attendant was sure that the hurt was feigned. He quickly jerked the man's arm out from his side and a roll of dirty bills dropped to the floor. The money amounted to almost $4,000, and upon investigation we learned from the Armenian Society of New York that the man had $50,000 held in trust by them."

LINCOLN MEMORIALS.

was chiefly instrumental in preserving the old cabin and the farm about it for all time. When it was announced some years ago that the property was to be sold at auction, Collier bought it and placed it in the hands of a voluntary association, which decided that the land should be turned into a national park not through the gifts of a few rich men, but by the aid of many thousands of American citizens.

Surrounding the old log cabin today stands a monumental granite temple, marking the centre of the farm on which Thomas Lincoln and Nancy Hanks settled after their long journey from Virginia. At the time of the centennial, the granite structure had just been begun, and the cornerstone was laid by President Roosevelt. Two years later the completed pile was formally dedicated by President Taft.

Lincoln Memorial University at Cumberland Gap, Tenn., is another of the important monuments that stand today to honor his memory. This institution, which was founded by the late General O. O. Howard, has for its object "the education of the masses," and its endowment, when completed, will stand as the combined gift of thousands of Americans of modest circumstances in all parts of the country. There is an Endowment Association with headquarters in this city which has been seeking for several years to complete the necessary fund. The university is intended for the so-called "poor whites" of the Cumberland Gap district—a district in which there are but four institutions of learning for a population of more than 1,250,000.

At the time of the centennial, almost $100,000 had been raised in this city by the trustees of the Lincoln Hospital and Home at Southern Boulevard and One Hundred and Forty-first street, and the sum has been gradually increased ever since. The work of this hospital, according to the plans of those in charge, is to stand as a lasting monument to Lincoln in this city, and its facilities are at the service of thousands of poor people without regard to race, creed or color.

NEVADA TURNING TO FARMING.

[San Francisco Call.]

Nevada is beginning to find herself, not only in a mining way, but likewise in an agricultural way. The late census bulletin shows a 93.4 per cent increase of poulation in the past decade, which is more than four times as great as the average for all states of the Union. Prior to 1900 the state of Nevada had been showing a downward trend in poulation ratios, so that the condition set forth in the census of 1910 marks a radical and, we believe, significant change, which means a greatly accelerated progress.

Nevada is a state of marvelous undeveloped resources. It is a region of great discoveries, some of them verified and some in the experimental stage. The remarkable record of the big Goldfield mines in the last half dozen years is the wonder of the world. Tonopah keeps pace as a big producer and the resurgescense of the Comstock gives great promise and has already resumed payment of dividends.

So much for mining, and now the agricultural interests are beginning to make themselves felt. The country about Reno has been converted into a delightful garden spot, and the big Truckee-Carson irrigation project of the reclamation service promises an enormous productive capacity, as may be inferred from the fact that a six-hundred-thou and-dollar beet sugar manufacturing plant has recently been installed at Fallon.

IMPORTANT NEWS LIKELY SATURDAY.

Labor Union's Move Probably Toward Concessions.

Still Further Gains in Number of Operatives Returning to Mills.

LAWRENCE, Mass., Feb. 16.—Further gains in the number of operatives who went into the mills this morning, the arraignment in police court of Mrs. Annie Welzenback and Emma and Lillian Stendl, who were arrested at midnight on a charge of attempting to prevent, by intimation, Miss Rose Roy and Miss Minnie Duquette from going to work in the Washington mills; a meeting of the Central Labor Union strike committee to hear reports from the sub-committee from mill agents, as to grievances; arrangements by Commissioner of Public Safety Lynch to increase the police force of the city and a meeting of the Industrial Workers of the World strike committee summarized this morning's events in connection with the strike of textile workers in this city.

There were no disturbances of a serious nature reported in the early morning hours by the militia or police.

The three young women pickets who were arrested have been particularly active in the strike and it is the claim of the authorities that many complaints have been made in regard to threatening language used by them when accosting persons on their way to work.

The three women defendants charged with intimidating pleaded not guilty and their cases were continued till next Tuesday morning. Each was placed under $200 bail, which was furnished at the time of their arrest. Judge Mahoney issued a warning against any acts of intimidation by pickets.

Encouraging reports were made at the Central Labor Union strike committee this morning and it was announced that there might be important news to give out tomorrow. No definite announcement was made as to what the news would be, but the inference is that the Central Labor Union movement has resulted in an offer to make concessions on the part of the mill officials and that the skilled workers will vote to go back pending further consideration of the grievances. Commissioner Lynch said today that 40 special police would be appointed tonight and placed on duty. He said he would further increase the force next week. L3

At the request of the millmen second conferences with the agents of the various mills and the Central Labor Union sub-committees were held today. This is taken to indicate that the mill officials have agreed upon a definite proposition for compromise and desired to communicate it to the committees. The sub-committees will report at a meeting of the general Central Labor Union committee at 1:30 this afternoon. While the union officials refused to say as to the progress made in the negotiations, it was apparent from their manner this noon that they considered a satisfactory settlement was at hand.

FLOODS RAPIDLY SUBSIDING.

Navas and Burguillos Suburbs of Spain in a Lamentable Condition.

SEVILLE, Spain, Feb 16.—The floods which have devastated this city for many days are now rapidly subsiding. Two of the suburbs, Navas anr Burguillos, which have been isolated from the rest of the city for over a week, are in a lamentable condition. Many of the inhabitants have been found dying of hunger. The cemeteries have in some cases been undermined by the water and corpses are floating in the streets. Relief stations have been organized and succor is being given to people in distress. The port of Seville has been re-opened, but all branches of industry are virtually paralyzed.

CAPE COD WITHIN ITS GRASP.

Southeastern Massachusetts Swept by Storm from the South.

BOSTON, Feb. 16. The Southern storm, which the experts predicted would probably smother New England under the heaviest snow blanket of the season, dodged off shore after leaving Norfolk, but southeastern Massachusetts was swept by its northwestern quadrant. Cape Cod was well within the grasp of the disturbance at 10 a. m., with the wind blowing 35 miles an hour at Highland Light and nearly 50 miles at Nantucket and Block Island. Revenue Cutters Gresham and Acushnet during the last ten days have cleared Nantucket sound of all low powered or sailing vessels and or by the stranded coal barge No. 16 of the Consolidation Coal Company remains among the ice floes off Great Point. The storm today prevented the rescue of the barge and it is believed that she will go to pieces. She was abandoned by her crew several days ago.

ENTIRE TOWNS WRECKED.

Financial Loss by Floods in Portugal Reaches $10,000,000.

LISBON, Portugal Feb. 16.—The subsidence of the floods throughout Portugal has brought to light he extent of the damage and shown that whole villages and parts of some towns have been entirely wrecked. The provinces of Estremadura, Algarve, Alemetjo and Minho suffered most. Scenes of desolation are observed for miles along the country roads. Houses and other buildings have collapsed and among their ruins dead cattle lie in thousands. There have also been many human victims. A large number of people have been left homeless and starving. The financial loss is estimated conservatively at $10,000,000. The government has sent 50,000 loaves of bread, 50,000 pounds of fish and 20,000 bottles of wine to the distressed people, and more supplies are being forwarded daily.

RIVER FRONT TO BE GUARDED.

Texas National Guard Ordered Out as a Precautionary Measure.

EL PASO, Texas, Feb. 16.—Shortly after midnight a company of the Texas National Guard was ordered out by Adjutant General Hutchings who is here from Austin, at the instance of the governor of eTexas. Forty-five men responded and will be used in protecting the river front. According to Adjutant General Hutchins, the militia was ordered merely as a precautionary measure and to assist in patrolling the Rio Grande. No outbreak has occurred, although the situation was tense.

NEW DISCLOSURES IN DYNAMITE CASE.

Government Action Based on Correspondence.

Conspiracy Shown to Have Spread from Boston to the Pacific Coast.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Feb. 16.—New disclosures made in the dynamite conspiracy cases through 40,000 letters and telegrams quoted in the indictment as implicating practically all the officials of the International Association of Bridge and Structural Iron Workers, will be the basis, it was declared today, upon which the government will seek to convict the 54 defendants who are charged with committing or abetting in almost 100 explosions.

The correspondence, contained in one of the 32 indictments and embracing what are termed "unconsummated acts of conspiracy" is held as showing that a vast plot, known to and furthered by Frank M. Ryan, president of the Iron Workers, and to members of his executive board and many business agents, was carried on for six years to destroy the property of steel and iron contractors who employed non-union labor. It charges all the defendants with being equally guilty as abettors. It also purports to reveal evidence that "jobs" became the accepted term to be sent through the mail to designate some place that was to be blown up, and that gradually the officials of local unions began to call on the international headquarters in Indianapolis to assist by dynamite and nitro-glycerine increasing the expenses of "open shop" contractors. Ortie E. McManigal, Herbert S. Hockin, second vice president, and James B. McNamara became, it is charged, an organized "dynamiting crew." Letters are included to show that fees paid McManigal and that the cost of doing local jobs frequently was discussed in letters.

A letter from Olaf A. Tvietmoe, of the local union in San Francisco, to J. J. McNamara in Indianapolis, after the Los Angeles Times disaster, stating that he "hoped Santa Claus would be as kind and generous to you with surprises," is quoted to show that the conspiracy spread from Boston to the Pacific coast.

Four more indictments, not yet made public, supplement the principal indictment containing the correspondence. These indictments name all 54 defendants as implicated in the general conspiracy and make these charges:

"That on 34 counts all the defendants are guilty as principals in illegal transportation of dynamite.

"That on the 34 counts, McManigal, John J. McNamara, James B. McNamara nd Hockin are guilty of illegally transporting dynamite and all the defendants are guilty of aiding and abetting them.

"That on 16 counts, all the defendants are guilty as principals in illegal transportation of nitro-glycerine.

"That on 16 counts, McManigal, John J. McNamara, James B. McNamara and Hockin are guilty of illegal transportation of nitro-glycerine and all the other defendants are guilty of aiding and abetting them."

The wide scope of the 32 indictments, which contains in all 123 counts, is due, it is announced, to the theory of the government that the defendants' alleged guilt is equal, no matter how small an individual's personal activity in the conspiracy may have been. Mr. Miller said it had been determined to press all the counts of the indictments against each of the defendants.

"The indictment setting out unconsumated acts of conspiracy, extensive as it is in presenting a mass of alleged incriminating correspondence between the defendants," said Mr. Miller, "only submits typical acts. If we had chosen, this indictment might have been run into many more hundreds of pages. Forty thousand letters were seized in the headquarters of the International Iron Workers' Association and from them the investigators chos evidence that we consider much more than sufficient to prove our case when offered in connection with corroborative evidence of wide extent and varied character. The freedom with which these men put on paper their plans, motives an dthe working out of their purposes is amazing."

TO RUN IN PRIMARIES.

Albert Shaw of Sagadahoc County Candidate for Governor of Maine.

BATH, Maine, Feb. 16.—Albert H. Shaw, a well known lumber man, and business man, today announced that after long and careful consideration o fthe matter he had decided to become a candidate in the Republican primaries for governor of Maine. He is the first candidate for the gubernatorial office for Sagadahoc county since the birth of the Republican party. Mr. Shaw declares that "law is the wil of the people, reduced to form and expression through their legislators, and approved by their executive. I believe the will of the people so expressed, and so approved, should be respected. If elected, I shall use my best efforts to enforce all laws which I may finfd upon the statute books." He has served in both branches of the state legislature.

FOR EAST RIVER IMPROVEMENT.

Plans Completed Will Call Upon Congress to Spend $40,000,000.

NEW YORK, Feb. 16.—Plans just completed by Colonel W. M. Black of the engineer corpps of the United States army wil call upon Congress to spend $40,000,000 for the improvement of the East river channel between New York and the Long Island shore. The plans recommend the removal of all the rocks and reefs in the channel, and the widening and deepening of the river at Little Hell gate and the Harlem Kills, wher the current is now so swift as to be a peril to navigation. A report on the necessity for the proposed improvement by the New York commerce commission, says: "The completion of the Panama canal, the state barge canal and the Cape Cod canal will find New York unprepared to take care of the increas in its commerce, unless the long neglected Est river improvement is pushed vigorously."

AVIATION INFLUENCES.

[Cassier's Magazine.]

Under the conditions following the general introduction of aviation some of the most important matters before legislators and military authorities will be the readjustments which must be compelled in legal, military and commercial matters. New property rights will have to be devised which shall lie within the powers of courts to enforce, and it must be realized that enactments which cannot be enforced will take their places along with those of the mice and rats to bell the cat. Attempts to maintain international boundaries must be abandoned, together with all efforts to examine merchandise, luggage or persons, these ideas becoming as antiquated as would be any attempts to control the movements of individuals within national limits. Universal free trade must follow the failure to control individual crossings of frontiers, and the right to go anywhere in the world, regardless of official wishes will have to be conceded by reason of the powerlessness of officials to know or do anything about it. All idea of regulation of personal or commercial movements will take its place along with medieval attempts to regulate individual opinion, becoming a curious and obsolete fact in history, comparble with the relation of the Inquisition as regards freedom of thought in religious matters or freedom or conduct in matters political.

We are then. face to face with a problem which is in the position of being capable of solving itself and not dependent upon the action of legislative bodies.

FINANCIAL.

NEW YORK, Feb. 16. Wall Street—The market opened with Amalgamated Coppr 65⅜, American Smelting and Refining 72, Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe 104, Canadian Pacific 231, Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul 104⅝, Colorado Fuel and Iron 25¼, Erie 31⅛, Interborough Metropolitan 17⅝, Interborough Metropolitan preferred 56⅜, Missouri, Kansas & Texas 26⅞, Northern Pacific 117⅞, Pennsylvania 122⅞, Reading 157¼, Southern Railway 27⅝, Union Pacific 165, United States Steel 60⅝, United States Steel preferred 108⅛, Lehigh Valley 157⅝.

10—Prices were virtually unchanged at the opening of the stock market today. Speculative interest was dull and the demand was too light to give the market a definite trend. The only changes of more than a small fraction were among a few inactive stocks Republic Steel preferred rose a point and Southern Railway preferred ⅝.

11—The market turned downward after the opening orders had been filled. Support appeared after some stocks registered half point losses. On the recovery, the copper group became prominent, and there was a better inquiry for certain other specialties, Tennessee Coper, General Electric and Mackay companies advanced 1 and Philadelphia Company 2¼, American Tobacco lost 1⅝ and Lorillard 2 points.

Noon—Fluctuations in stocks during the morning were of the same narrow character as of the past few days of the week. Almost the only stocks which seemed to have a speculative following were the Coppers. There was some buying of these shares, owing to the heavy exports of the metal and reports of better domestic trade conditions, but operators were bearish toward the general list. No heavy selling was attempted, however, and the market was supported. The tone became heavy again after 11 o'clock in spite of the independent strength shown by the copper issues. Reading, Union Pacific and United States Steel were pressed for sale steadily, and their lack of resistance encouraged bear operations in other quarters. Colorado Fuel became rather active after long neglect and yielded 1⅝. The Bethlehem Steel stocks lost about as much. Bonds were steady. Money on call steady at 2¼ per cent. Prime mercantile paper 3½ to 4 per cent. Exchanges $348,912,893; balances $17,408,360.

COMMEMORATIVE SERVICE.

Knights of Columbus Honor Deceased Members and Act on Memorial Church Windows.

Newport Council, Knights of Columbus, at its meeting Thursday evening held a commemorative service in honor of the deceased members of the organization, 15 in number, as follows: Peter F. Curley, John T. Smith, Patrick W. Good, Louis Shanteler, George A. Sullivan, Richard Fitzgerald, Thomas J. Lennon, John J. Jordan, Edward J. Connell, Thomas Cremin, Thomas F. Fitzsimmons, James B. Cottrell, Dennis Casey, Maurice E. Crane, Eugene F. McCrohan, William A. Toole, James M. Ahearn and Sebastian J. Tubley.

The service was conducted by officers of the Council, after which Chaplain Lawrence L. Denning, U. S. A., stationed at Fort Greble, a member of the order, delivered the address and Representative John B. Sullivan gave the eulogy. During the service the choir of the Council, under the direction of Lecturer Albert Commette, rendered "Lead, Kindly Light," "Abide with Me," and "Nearer, My God, to Thee," and Mr. J. Frank Albro sang "The Last Chord." Rev. Fathers Tierney, Hines and Ryan of St. Mary's Church were present.

At the busines meeting, preceding the service, the Council voted to place a memorial window in the new St. Augustin's Church and announcement was made that the design for the memorial window which the Council will place in the new St. Joseph's Church had been accepted by Father Higney and the window will be ready for installation after next month. The windows will cost $500 each.

Next Thursday morning, Washington's birthday, the members will attend a solemn high mass which will be celebrated in St. Joseph's Church by the chaplain, Rev. Dr. Doran. It will be semi-public, and among those present will be the families of the deceased members.

A WAR MEMORIAL.

Dedication of Figure Presented by Soldiers' and Sailors' Society Set for Washington's Birthday.

The program of exercises for the dedication of the bronze memorial to be erected by the Soldiers' and Sailors' Historical Society of Rhode Island in the State House in Providence Washington's birthday has been completed and final arrangements made for the ceremonies. Invitations have been extended to the members of the General Assembly and others interested in the matter.

The memorial is to occupy the niche in the west wall of the lobby at the southern entrance of the State House, directly opposite and facing the bronze tablet to General John Sullivan. The memorial is in rich bronze cast by the Gorham Manufacturing Company from models by William W. Manatt. It consists of a female figure of History holding in the right hand a long sword, the point resting on the ground, while the left hand is guarding a number of scrolls in a tall urn bearing the coat of arms of the state of Rhode Island. These scrolls typify the records of the state and her sons in the Civil war.

The figure stands above the tablet, across the top of which in raised letters is the title of the memorial, "History Guarding the Records."

On the tablet is the inscription "Presented by the Soldiers and Sailors' Historical Society of Rhode Island, A. D. 1911, in honor of the veterans of the Civil war, 1861-1865."

At the left of the inscription stands a figure of an infantryman and to the right that of a sailor, both in bas relief. The soldier stands at attention, his rifle in order, while the sailor has a coil of rope just ready to heave.

The order of exercises, at which the chairman of the committee, General Elisha H. Rhodes, will preside, will consist of prayer by Rev. Charles H. Ewer, former department commander of the Department of Rhode Island, Grand Army of the Republic, delivery of the memorial to the society by the sculptor, William W. Manatt; presentation of the memorial to Governor Pothier by the chairman, General Rhodes; acceptance and turning it over to the State House commission; address by the president of the society, Lieutenant Ezra K. Parker, former commander, Department of Rhode Island, Grand Army of the Republic.

The Soldiers' and Sailors' Historical Society is composed of men who participated in the Civil war and during the several years that it has been organized has published nearly 100 papers on personal reminiscences of the war. The movement to place a memorial in the State House began about a year ago.

ALDERMANIC BUSINESS.

New Arrangement Made for a Man to Care Properly for the Swill Brow.

The Board of Aldermen held the weekly meeting Thursday evening, Mayor Boyle presiding and Aldermen Hughes, Leidy and McLeish present.

The weekly pay rolls were approved for the following amounts: Streets and highways, $539.75; police, $598.25; fire department, $511.24; city officers, $252.55; firemen in theatres, $36.

A plumber's license was granted to Jeremiah A. Corcoran, on transfer of eating house license from Jacob Aronson to Theodore Wahl was granted. Max David was granted a renewal of a junk shop license and Max Teitz was granted a junk dealer's and a junk gatherer's license.

Resolutions were passed authorizing the Sinking Fund Commissioners to accept $100 each for the care of the John B. Langley and Samuel B. Southwick burial grounds in the City cemetery.

The petition of Patrick Shea for an extension of the sewer in Mount Vernon street was referred to the street commissioner.

Mr. Hughes asked about the beach appraisal and Mayor Boyle said he had heard from Mr. Johnston that a report was expected from the out-of-town appraiser this week. Mr. Hughes said the Committee of Twenty-Five is anxious to know the amount and Mayor Boyle said he knew of no way to hurry it.

The mayor inquired about the committee on the swill brow and Mr. McLeish said that he, with Street Commissioner Sullivan, Contractor Dugan and Executive Office Sampson, had visited the place and arrangements were made to have a man give it proper care. The man is under the Board of Health and will care for the place for the pickings, agreeing to do better than the other man did. Mayor Boyle suggested that the committee be continued to see if this promise is kept.

Mr. McLeish raised a question about payment for fowls stolen from one of his constituents on Wellington avenue; the man who stole them is in jail. The Mayor said if a dog had killed them the board could award damages, but there is no provision when a two-legged individual caused their loss.

The board then adjourned.

The board will next week meet Wednesday evening as Thursday is a holiday.

LOBSTER MEN RE-APPOINTED.

Chief Deputy Luth and Deputy Harrington of This City Again Named by the Commission.

At a meeting of the Commissioners of Inland Fisheries, held at the State House in Providence Thursday afternoon at the call of Vice President D. B. Fearing, the following lobster deputies were re-appointed for the ensuing year: Chief Deputy William T. Luth of Newport, J. Harrington of Newport, J. B. Allen of Block Island and A. V. Willis of Block Island.

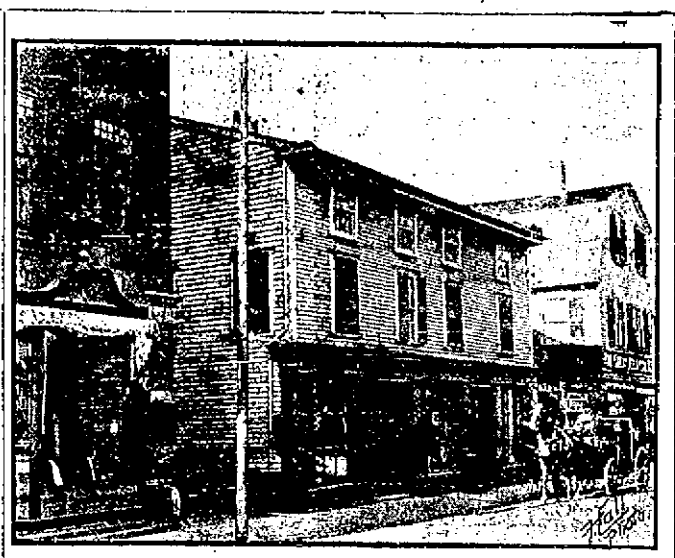

A request was received from Walter C. Gardner, state representative from Warwick, asking the commission to stock Sands pond, Warwick, with land-locked salmon and take trout. The request was favorably received, but owing to the fact that the season is too far advanced for immediate action it was decided to investigate conditions at the pond, in order to prepare it for fish which will be furnished at a more favorable season of the year.

Plans were also discussed for making a systematic study and biological survey of the principal ponds and streams of the state, with a view to stocking them intelligently with suitable fish.

IN THE ARTISTS' CLASS.

Only Good Things Are to be Said of Mr. Werrenrath's Singing.

Second in the Philharmonic Society's Series Introduces a Varied Program.

Again Newport people have had an opportunity to enjoy first-class music given in a first-class way, and again a visiting artist is taking away the knowledge that the best is none too good for this city Thursday evening. In Masonic hall, was given the second of the three concerts for this season arranged by the Philharmonic Society. It was the fourteenth concert, and this is the society's sixteenth season.

The entertainment was somewhat of the recital style, as but one artist was announced. There was, however, another who was an indispensable part of the concert—and he was an artist, too. The one everybody went to hear was Reinald Werrenrath a New York baritone, of whom such flattering press notices had been read that much was expected. The accompanist was Mr. Gene Ware, who was a decided success in that extremely difficult role.

Of Mr. Werrenrath only good things are to be said. A young man of evident gentle breeding, bright, clean, genial, yet strong and enthusiastic, it is a pleasure to come in contact with him. As a singer, he is an artist in the artists' class. With a voice which is really musical and fitted to sing melodies, he has acquired a finish rather than a polish. He is decidedly not of the coarse-grained type; he is the personification of quiet success.

Most of the time he sang with a medium amount of power, by doing which, with an intermission, he was able to give a full program without in the least becoming wearisome. Indeed, the large and fine audience was unanimous in the conviction that it desired more, for after the program and one encore had been completed not a single person moved to rise. All sat in their seats and clapped vigorously until Mr. Werrenrath reappeared and sang again, quietly announcing in a pleasing manner the name, composer, author and language of this encore.

Mr. Werrenrath has a good compass and his voice is true and satisfying in all its tones. His technique is so complete as to banish all evidences of itself. Nothing was done for show purposes, yet everything which would combine to give the best presentation of the varied styles of music was there. His low notes were full, with good bass quality; his upper tones were musical. He had power when he wished to use it, and also gave delicate, not to say tender, passages in a way to hold close attention.

The program, in response to a request to make it strong, was what the singer regarded as pretty "stiff." In conversation he said of himself: "I am a crank on American songs;" yet to split the demand he had excluded them all. Still, he remarked, after giving this program, that Newport people are evidently used to good music.

The program has already been published. Of the second number, "Hear me, ye winds and waves," by Handel, it might be explained that this aria is from the opera of "Scipio," originally written in Italian; and the recitative which preceded it is from "Julius Caesar." They joined perfectly. Nobody would suppose they were by the same composer as the great oratorios, or the quaint organ concertos. They would easily pass for good opera music of today, until it is remembered that so much of modern opera is very unmusical. These numbers are very musical and quite satisfying in every way. The aria is dramatic and was so rendered.

The Schubert Meeresstille (Op. 3, No. 2.) gave a good picture of a calm. The other Schubert number, "Gruppe aus dem Tartarus," was quite opposite. Of the three Grieg songs; "Langs en Å," which is of the pleading spirit, and "Et syn," a jolly Spanish bolero sort of style, were sung in Norwegian, while the little war song (at least that was its vigorous character) "Min tanke er at Maegtig Fjeld," was given in Danish and called for some low tones. There was great applause.

In the heart of this "stiff" program was a group of Irish and English songs which lost not a whit in comparison with what went before or after it. In fact, it seems as if many would declare that this was the sweetest and best liked group of all the evening. "The rose tree," a traditional Irish air, beautifully arranged by Arthur Whiting, has a flowing melody which interests and pleases, while "Little Mary Cassidy," intensely Irish in its wit and lively style of music (arranged by H. Lane Wilson), carried the house before it; everybody was longing for an immediate personal acquaintance with "Little Mary."

Then there was a good old English song arranged by Lucy Broadwood (traditional Surrey air), "Somebody has stolen my true love away." A choice English antique air, with a beautiful, delicate accompaniment was "What if I seek for love," which is credited to the "first and second book of Ayres," written by Robert Jones, 1601. There was also "The pretty creature," by Stephen Storace, 1763-1796, arranged by H. Lane Wilson, which is bright, playful, manly, romantic, by turns. This group was decidedly encored and then came perhaps the best treat of all the evening, an old English song which pretty soon it may be quite safe to say the musical people of Newport really love; "Drink to me only with thine eyes." The audience sat breathless, to hear the beautiful, well-nigh perfect way in which it was given.

Then came modern music—three pieces by Wolf, in German. The "Zur ruh, zur ruh" was not at all an equivalent for a United States "Hurrah! Hurrah!" It was very impressive, beginning with pure tones, low and soft, and still soft when they went higher. "Auf ein alten bild" was not dissimilar, but "Liebesglueck" was. It is stirring.

Lastly were two songs by Richard Strauss, who is writing another opera and now has Europe guessing. He is versatile. From orchestral work, and Salome, and Electra, to the songs of Thursday evening is a long jump. The first was "Du meines herzens Kroncuin" (Op. 21, No. 2), a real song, with a melody and sweetness quite in harmony with other good things on the program. The second was "Aus den Liedern der trauer" (Op. 15, No. 4), a vigorous composition finely given by singer and accompanist. This was the last on the program; but in response to a determined encore a delicate bit of German wisdom "Lauf der welt" ("The way of the world"), with music by Grieg, was given, and deservedly and loudly applauded.

After the concert a Newport woman approached Mr. Werrenrath, and saying that she used to hear his father (who was a Danish tenor) and grandfather, when they sang in Plymouth Church, Brooklyn, inquired for them. Mr. Werrenrath was pleased to meet her and they had a friendly conversation.

SECRET OF THE SUCCESS OF "SEVEN DAYS."

A play to be what Clyde Fitch called "a knock-out hit" must have its best advertising from those who see it. The success of "Seven Days" is due to such advertising. The Blue Book magazine said: "At the end of 'Seven Days' the audience flies out eager to tell its friends to go and see the funniest play in years." The extent to which a play is advertised by its audiences is shown in the length of its runs. "Seven Days" is the only comedy which has reached a third year in New York, which it did at the beginning of the present season at the Astor Theatres. Further, there are the six months in Chicago and Boston to stamp "Seven Days" as a great fun maker.

Acton Davies, the dramatic critic of the New York Evening Sun, wrote of "Seven Days:" "The sheer fun of this play is going to make it a record breaker. It is one long laugh from start to finish."

CAMP THOMAS OFFICIALLY VISITED.

Camp Thomas, United States Spanish War Veterans, was paid an official visit Thursday by Department Inspector Patterson, who complimented the camp upon conditions as he found them. He also spoke of the bill for pensioning widows and orphans of those who served in the war, now before Congress. The camp passed a resolution approving the bill.

It also heard a report of a hearing in Providence during the day, when the department officers spoke in favor of the passage of a bill to provide state relief for needy veterans of the war with Spain and their dependents. Commander Hall of the Soldiers' Home was present and said that, so long as the privileges of the home were not sought, he was in hearty sympathy of the movement. No one spoke against the bill.

Rev. Dr. Talbot Writes of the Death of John Gilpin and an Old Newport Sounding Board.

Rev. Mr. J. Talbot, D. D., a former proprietor of The Daily News and superintendent of schools in this city, will observe his ninety first birthday February 26. He is now making his home with his son, Emory, in Dorchester and is in good health, allowing him to attend public meetings and to act as presiding officer.

In a personal letter, under date of February 15, Rev. Dr. Talbot writes as follows:

"I have just been reading over again your letter of September 15, 1911, about John Gilpin, and the reading keeps my eyes moist all through it—the account of the funeral, of those present of all classes, of the naval officer who placed the rose on John's breast, and all the associations revived in my mind, with the almost visible recollection of the persons whom I knew in the days of Newport life, and the re-awakened wish that my subsequent life could have been passed in Newport.

"In your letter you speak of the church (First Methodist Episcopal sounding board. I was not in Newport at Conference of 1844; but I have in mind a rumor of a sounding board, which I think must have been suspended from the framework overhead, and could then be easily removed without leaving any evidence of its existence.

"My birthday comes again 10 days from this date. I do not exploit it. It is sufficient for me to count it.

"Yours as ever,

"M. J. Talbot."

THE TRUTH ABOUT ICEBERGS.

[Harold J. Shepstone in St. Nicholas.]

Many existing theories regarding icebergs require modification. For instance, it has generally been believed that for every cubic foot of ice above water there are seven below, and a berg therefore that towers, say, 100 feet above the ocean level, has a total height of 800 feet. Lieutenant Peary, the conqueror of the North Pole, declares that this is not always the case. "It is true," he says, "that the heaviest portion of the berg is submerged, but it is wrong to say that seven eighths of its height is under water. I have noted several instances where only two thirds of a berg is submerged."
